CAN'T A GAL HAVE SOME PEACE?

A female otter, who went through a lot yesterday, glances quizzically from a tub at Marin Humane Society headquarters in Ignacio. The otter, its name unknown, was taken into protective custody by the society after being found untended in a child's swimming pool on the enclosed porch of a Fairfax home. Police were summoned to the home at 458 Bolinas Road by a neighbor who said the resident hadn't been seen in a long time. Later, however, the resident, Peter J. Abram, showed up at the humane society, said he'd been in the hospital and claimed his otter. Case closed.

Bales Answers 'Quota' Report

Marin Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales said today that only one incident involving the Sausalito Police Department had been referred to his office by the county grand jury and, in this instance, the police had been cleared.

His remarks were in response to a statement in a grand jury report released Monday which recommended firing of the top three police officials. The report had said it made its recommendation on the basis of evidence of a quota system of arrests in the department but that "certain other matters" had been turned over to Bales for investigation.

"The only request for investigation involving this subject made by the grand jury to this office was to review circumstances of the fatal shooting of a 24-year-old burglar on April 14, 1970, by members of that police department," Bales said.

The district attorney said that after his investigation, he concluded the shooting was justified because "of the reasonable belief on the part of the arresting officers that the same was necessary to protect their own lives and prevent the escape of a felony suspect caught in the act of burglarizing a Sausalito building late at night."

Although witnesses before the grand jury are reported to have described brutality by officers, dishonesty in operation and favors to individuals, Bales said no matters other than the shooting were referred to his office.

He had not been involved in the grand jury investigation of the Sausalito police which the jury began last July, Bales said, because it was decided at that time the jury would conduct the inquiry independently.

Consequently, Bales said, he had been asked for no further advice or assistance in conducting hearings, questioning witnesses, examining evidence or preparing the report "which has and is receiving widespread publicity."

Tuesday night, Sausalito Mayor Alexander R. Imlay praised the police chief, James D. Wright, and chastised the grand jury for recommending ouster of the chief and two subordinates.

Imlay said he spoke for the entire city council in declaring jury findings unsupported by evidence.

STATEWIDE FIRM

Sale Of Novato Hospital Near

Novato General Hospital, principal medical facility for North Marin, is to be sold to Community Psychiatric Centers of San Francisco, managers of psychiatric centers throughout the state.

The firm announced yesterday it had an "agreement in principle" to purchase the locally owned hospital which was established in 1961.

Novato General would continue to operate as a general hospital after the sale, according to Lowrey, Russom and Leeper, public relations representative for Community Psychiatric.

E. V. Grundstrom of Novato, a hospital director, said the hospital is being sold because of "changes in the medical field" and the difficulty of financing the operation locally.

The sale is "subject to so many conditions, we don't know the final date," he said. Directors chose to sell to Community Psychiatric because they felt it was "community oriented" and "we felt they could serve the community best," Grundstrom said.

The sale price is 26,000 shares of Community Psychiatric common stock, the dollar value determined by the price of the stock on the day the sale is completed, according to Jerry Russon of Lowry, Russom and Leeper.

Community Psychiatric Centers stock was selling today at 27 and seven-eighths a share, indicating that the sale price would be about $728,000 at that listing.

Novato General Hospital "will continue to operate the way it is operating" with CPC taking over management, Russom said. "It's simply a change in ownership."

A large firm can operate more economically, Russom said. No staff change is planned since the new owners don't have any doctors or nurses on their payroll, he reported.

Novato General Hospital would be operated in conjunction with Campbell General Hospital acquired by the firm in October 1971, Russom said. Campbell General was the first general hospital acquired by the firm, which previously had operated only psychiatric centers.

Novato General now is owned by "about 27 or 28" stockholders, according to Grundstrom.

It was oepend as a 30-bed hospital in 1961 at a cost of $430,000 after North Marin voters seceded from the Marin County Hospital District. A new wing, including an intensive care unit, was added in 1969 at a cost of $530,000.

Major Gunfight At Two-Ireland Border

Widespread Violence In 1st Day Of Britain Rule

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Britain formally took over rule of Northern Ireland today in a day marked by a major gunbattle across the border with the Irish Republic, an assassination attempt in Londonderry and bomb explosions in Belfast.

The British Parliament completed legislation ending 51 years of Protestant rule by the Northern Ireland Parliament, Queen Elizabeth II gave her Royal Assent and Northern Ireland Premier Brian Faulkner resigned.

For the next year at least Ulster, as the six northern counties are called, will be ruled by William Whitelaw as Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in the British cabinet. If this move ends the violence that has taken nearly 300 lives in the past three years Britain will review the situation.

Faulkner announced he would deal openly with Whitelaw but the British government announced it would send more troops to Northern Ireland over the Easter holidays "as a normal precaution." A force of 4;000 has been alerted to reinforce the 16,500 already here.

A British army spokesman said more than 3,000 rounds of ammunition were exchanged in what he called a "major battle" between four gunmen in the Irish Republic and Northern Ireland policemen who came under fire at Belleak, 10 miles south of the border town of Rosslea.

"They were firing from trees across the river which forms the frontier at this point," the spokesman said. "That made them doubly hard to spot."

In Londonderry, Ivan Cooper, a member of the Northern Ireland Parliament, said someone tried to assassinate him with a bomb planted in his car. He is a civil rights leader who has pleaded the cause of the Roman Catholic minority in the Stormont as parliament here was called.

Cooper, who said he had received hundreds of threats from enraged Protestants, told newsmen he was awakened at 5:45 a.m. by a telephone call saying a friend had been taken to a hospital. He checked the hospital and found the call was a hoax.

"Just then the bomb went off," he said. "It was a personal bomb, designed not for damage to property but to me." Cooper was not injured.

Four bombs exploded in Belfast Wednesday and Wednesday night, one of them a huge one that killed an army officer and shattered windows in City Hall and the Royal Courts of Justice.

A British soldier was wounded seriously today when the Ferret scout car he commanded on a routine border patrol struck a mine near Rosslea, 80 miles southwest of Belfast.

In Belfast itself an army patrol came under fire at the Busy Bee shopping center in the Roman Catholic Anderstown district after being lured there by an anonymous telephone call saying a bomb had been planted in a parked car.

Faulkner's resignatioc statement was bitter.

"We have been treated badly by those who are, for the time being, Her Majesty's ministers at Westminister —and this

Lack Of Reading Laid On Present Food Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Both the Nixon and Johnson administrations were accused today of ignoring a 1966 report aimed at curbing mounting food prices.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., a member of the commission which submitted the study to the White House, said both President Nixon and his predecessor, Lyndon B. Johnson, "swept the recommendations under the rug" because the report blamed the meat packers and chain stores for the price situation.

"The administration of Lyndon B. Johnson found the recommendations uncomfortable because they put the finger very heavily on the chain stores and the meat packers," he said. "They swept the matter under the rug."

McGee said he had hoped the Nixon administration would implement some of the report's findings, but "now it seems it has been swept under the rug by the new administration."

He made his charge at a Senate Agriculture Appropriations subcommittee hearing at which Virginia Knauer, Nixon's special assistant for consumer affairs, testified.

Mrs. Knauer said she hadn't read the 1966 report but would "try to get a copy."

Mrs. Knauer also predicted Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, who met Wednesday with executives from a dozen of the nation's biggest supermarket chains, would succeed in bringing food prices down "pronto."

50 Major Cities Report Drop In Serious Crimes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Violent crimes increased 9 per cent nationwide last year but 53 major cities reported a drop in serious crime, the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced Thursday.

The suburbs, usually considered safer than inner cities, reported an 11 per cent increase in all crimes in 1971, while rural areas rose 10 per cent.

Altogether, nationwide crime of all sorts rose 6 per cent over 1970, which acting Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst said was the smallest increase in six years.

The 53 cities reporting a decrease in serious crime last year compares with 22 cities in 1970 and 17 the year before.

Of so-called violent crimes against persons, murder, forcible rape and robbery each rose by 10 per cent nationwide, while aggravated assault increased 8 per cent. Property crimes — burglary, larceny of more than $50 and auto theft —rose by 6 per cent.

The preliminary figures were contained in the FBI's uniform crime reports, a collection of police statistics supplied voluntarily by local, county and state law enforcement agencies to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

The District of Columbia, which President Nixon hopes to make a model of law enforcement efforts to reduce street crime, reported a 13 per cent decrease and registered fewer crimes in every category except murders, which rose by 54 to 275 last year.

Robberies in the capital dropped by 5 per cent, forcible rape 15 per cent and aggravated assault 15 per cent.

New York, however, reported crime increasing in every category except for slight declines in larceny and breaking and entering. It led all major U.S. cities with 1,466 murders, up 349 from 1970, followed by Chicago (824), Detroit (577) and Philadelphia (435).

During the six years through 1971, the annual rate of increase of serious crime was 11 per cent in 1966; 16 per cent in 1967; 17 per cent in 1968; 12 per cent in 1969; 11 per cent in 1970 and 6 per cent in 1971.

Geographically, the Northeast reported a 10 per cent crime increase, led by robbery which was up 24 per cent. The Western states showed an 8 per cent rise, the South up 4 per cent and the North-Central states up 3 per cent. Armed robbery and assaults with firearms both showed substantial increases during the year.

Denver, Colo., 0.3; Washington, 13.3; Jacksonville, Fla., 4.2; Tampa, Fla., 1.2; Chicago, 0.9; Indianapolis, 9.5; Wichita, Kan., 3.7; Louisville, Ky., 9.5; Baltimore, 12.4; Detroit, 0.3; St. Paul, Minn., 4.2; Kansas City, Mo., 3.9; St. Louis, 3.3; Omaha, Neb., 4.6; Rochester, N.Y., 10.3; Akron, Ohio, 4.4; Tulsa,

10 Turk Kidnapers Killed In Gun Battle

ANKARA (UPI)—The Turkish government said its commando units killed 10 terrorists in a room-by-room gun battle in the village of Kizildere today after the terrorists murdered two British and one Canadian hostage.

The official government announcement disputed earlier reports by local authorities and the state controlled news agency that the hostages and their abductors died when the terrorists blew up the house where they were under siege by the commandos.

The government said the commandos stormed the two-story house in the mountain village 200 miles northeast of Ankara at 5 p.m. (10 a.m. EST) after terrorists holed up inside all day opened fire on the troops rushed to the scene.

Inside, the government said, troops found the bodies of three men kidnaped Sunday night at the Black Sea town of Unye where they worked as radar technicians at a NATO base. The kidnapers said the three men would be killed if the government did not free three other Turkish extremists under death sentence for murder and treason.

Police in Kizildere said they received a tip that the terrorists had holed up in a house there and Turkish troops and commandos were summoned. At one point, they said, the terrorists held a Turkish woman and her two children in the house but freed them. She was the wife of Emrullan Eraslan, the village headman.

The government statement said the troops found the three hostages dead, shot and bound hand and foot, when they entered the house.

"Despite announcement over loudspeakers calling on the bandits to surrender, the statement said, "the terrorists opened fire on government forces ...."

Then came the order to attack, the statement said.

The hostages were identified as Gordon Banner, 35, and Charles Turner, 45, both British, and John Law, 21, a Canadian whose family lives in England.

The state-controlled Anatolian News Agency said the terrorists blew up the building, killing themselves, the three hostages and lawyer Sener Sadi it said was flown there to try to negotiate the hostages' release.

Banks, Chain Stores Open Good Friday

Banks in Marin and Southern Sonoma will close for the day at noon tomorrow, Good Friday, and most government offices and many small stores will close from noon to 3 p.m. Most large chain stores, however, will conduct business as usual.

All city halls except Novato will close the three hours. The Marin Civic Center and Hall of Justice will be open all day. On the other hand, Sonoma County offices and courts will close for the three-hour Good Friday observance.

Marin Municipal Water District offices will close for three hours, but the North Marin County Water District office will not.

Chambers of commerce reports differed. Some chambers reported most stores will be open. Others said almost all stores except big department stores will close from noon to 3 p.m.

All banks, however, reportedly will close in contrast to previous years when they closed only for three hours.

The Mill Valley Chamber of Commerce said the banks are following the lead of federal reserve banks despite the fact that Friday normally is a heavy banking day.

Environment Plays Major Factor In Housing Position Paper

By FRANK FARRARA

Policies that would protect the environment, encourage a mixture of housing and have far-reaching economic and social effects are set forth in a proposed housing element for the Novato area general plan.

The Novato Planning Commission will have its first hearing on the element prepared by the planning department at 8 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

Broad goals are proposed — ranging from providing housing to persons of all ages to determining when a development would cost the public more than it would bring in return.

Senior planner Mark Westfall said the element explores housing matters "generally overlooked" and provides a "total look" at all housing possibilities.

Another is that the city try to reduce commuting both by persons who work in the community and live elsewhere and those who live in Novato and work elsewhere.

Commuting into the community could be reduced by providing housing the workers could afford and by providing local jobs.

One of the proposed goals is to have the city draw up "rules of access" to housing, which would determine who would occupy housing "in a situation like the current housing shortage."

Westfall said such a principle is now in effect, for example at Hamilton Air Force Base, where housing is restricted to military, and at senior citizen projects, where it is restricted to the elderly.

He conceded that a "rules of access" policy might not be workable, but should be discussed.

Because of the high cost of housing it is proposed that the city seek "to reduce to a minimum" the number of families who cannot pay their entire housing costs out of their income by intervening for lower costs "at every phase of home building."

Other proposed goals are that the community provide housing for all ages, that the city keep residents continuously informed of decisions, legislative executive and nongovernmental, that concern housing, and that new

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Wreckage Found

AVALON (UPI) — Two youngsters hiking through a rugged area of Catalina Island yesterday found the wreckage of a small plane and the body of Roy W. Corrigan, son of famous pioneer aviator Douglas (Wrong-Way) Corrigan.

The elder Corrigan earned his nickname Wrong Way in 1938, when he flew from Brooklyn to Ireland despite the refusal of aviation authorities to give him permission to attempt a trans-atlantic flight in his monoplane.

A second body was also found in the wreckage of the plane piloted by the younger Corrigan, but authorities had not positively identified it as Powell.

Shot Rehearsal

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Engineers pumped hundreds of thousands of gallons of frigid propellants into Apollo 16's Saturn 5 rocket today in the final hours of a week-long countdown rehearsal for the flight to the moon in 17 days.

The exercise aimed toward an afternoon simulated launch. The countdown will stop nine seconds short of ignition of the Saturn's five first stage engines.

It was the final test before the launch of astronauts John W. Young, Thomas K. Mattingly and Charles M. Duke at 12:54 p.m. (EST) April 16 on the nation's next-to-last moon landing expedition.

'Morning After'

CLEARWATER BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — A Boston biochemist thinks he may have found a "morning after" birth control pill that will combat both breast cancer and blood clots, two of the major problems among women taking contraceptive pills.

In three three years of experiments with thousands of rats, rabbits and hamsters, Dr. Herbert H. Wotiz of the Boston University Medical School said he found that a hormone called estriol effectively would prevent reproduction.

More importantly, there is evidence to suggest that the hormone serves as a cancer fighter as well as helping to build a blood component which dissolves clots, Wotiz told a science writers' seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Berrigan Fate

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The fate of Rev. Philip F. Berrigan and six other antiwar activists — Judases of violence or apostles of peace, depending upon which set of attorneys is talking — will rest in the hands of nine women and three men today.

One day shy of the end of its 10th week, the trial of six present or former priests and nuns of the Roman Catholic left and a Moslem from Pakistan went to a federal court jury sometime after noon, after a lengthy charge by Judge R. Dixon Herman.

Tax Withholding Hearing April 11

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state Franchise Tax Board will hold a public hearing April 11 to review the impact of the new state income tax withholding program, Controller Houston Flournoy announced Wednesday.

"Now is the time to take a preliminary look at how the program is working," said Flournoy, board chairman. "If there are possible adjustments that would provide more equitable treatment for some taxpayers, we wish to consider them"

Flournoy said data from the first three months of operation of the program "is not expected to be conclusive but may help the board in detecting trends and planning necessary action."

Boys' Bank Job Inspired By TV

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Authorities said today two brothers, 15 and 12 years old, threatened to blow up a bank if they weren't paid a ransom of $800.

The two, not identified by police, said they got the idea "from police programs on television."

Protest To Visit

MIAMI (UPI) — The Soviet research ship Akademik Kurchatov yesterday ended a five-day friendship and scientific visit marred by anti-Soviet protests, several bomb scares, the detonation of a floating bomb less than a mile from the ship and tight security in Miami harbor.

On an oceanographic mission in the Caribbean, crewmen have indicated their next destination probably will be the waters off Margarita, a resort island of about 70,000 persons.

Closing Embassy

KAMPALA (UPI) — President Idi Amin announced today he is closing the Israeli Embassy in Kampala and giving its staff 10 days to leave Uganda.

Amin said Israelis in Uganda had been involved in "subversive activities" and thus left him no choice but to expel them.

In a speech to officers commanding Uganda's army, air force, police and penal authority, Amin accused Israel of selling his government "unreliable" second-hand aircraft.

A Nixon Summons

PARIS (UPI) — Ambassador William J. Porter, chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris Vietnam talks, was summoned back to Washington today for consultation on the negotiations which President Nixon has suspended indefinitely.

Porter presumably will confer with Nixon although a U.S. spokesman did not say whether that would be the case.

A Black Provost

DETROIT (UPI) — The University of Detroit Wednesday named a 42-year-old black Protestant as the first provost in the predominantly Catholic school's 95-year history.

Dr. James W. Woodruff will have full responsibility for the day-to-day operation of the university. He becomes the highest ranking black man in any Jesuit College in the nation.

Council Backs Pot Initiative

BERKELEY (UPI) —The Berkeley City Council has voted to support a statewide initiative to legalize marijuana.

Councilman Tom McLaren was the only dissenter in the 8-1 vote Tuesday night.

The council also considered ordering Berkeley police to stop enforcing current laws against marijuana without waiting for them to be replaced, but voted that down, 5-3, with Mayor Warren Widener abstaining.

The council also voted 7 to 1 to urge Congress to repeal legislation cutting off food stamps to households of "unrelated people."

British Movie Mogul J. Arthur Rank Dies

WINCHESTER, England (UPI — J. Arthur Rank, founder of Britain's mightiest film empire, died Wednesday at 83.

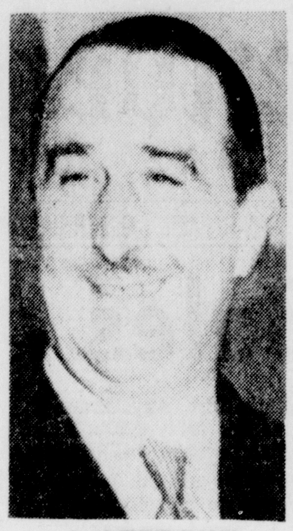
Rank, who became Lord Rank in 1957, stepped into the world of films in 1933 because he wanted a way to revive the flagging interest of pupils in his weekly Sunday School class. At the beginning of each of his films he used the symbol of his organization, a man striking a huge gong.

The wealthy flour miller parlayed his huge Rank Organization into an empire that also included movie theaters, film studios and dance and bingo halls.

As a Sunday School teacher, Rank quickly found existing religious films were inferior, and it seemed better to make new ones. He looked into it and found that short religious films would not pay.

Rank decided he would have to make the odd commercial film as well. In 1935 his British National Film Company turned out its first effort, "Turn of the Tide," about a fishing village in his native Yorkshire.

It won a prize at the Venice Film Festival and critical praise, but none of the British film distributors would touch it. So Rank decided to buy a movie theater. It was the first of more than 600 in the Gaumont and Odeon theater circuits he later would own.



J. ARTHUR RANK
Succumbs at 83

Rank quickly moved on to other films. He introduced such stars as John Mills, Trevor Howard, James Mason, Dirk Bogarde, Laurence Olivier and Stewart Granger and directors David Lean and Sir Carol Reed to British and world screens.

The flour empire he inherited, meanwhile, grew into the giant Rank, Hovis, McDougall combine, one of Britain's largest companies.

He retired from the company in 1962 but stayed on as president of the Rank Organization.

Pope Paul To Kiss Feet Of 12 Boys in Ceremony

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI led the Roman Catholic Church today into the most solemn period of the Christian year with a ceremony which called on him to wash and kiss the feet of 12 boys from a Rome institution.

The gesture recalls the scene described in the Gospel of John, Chapter 13, in which Jesus washed the feet of his disciples at the Last Supper.

The Pontiff was scheduled to cross town to the Basilica of St. John in Lateran for the ceremony at 5 p.m.

Symbolizing the apostles were 12 boys from the Don Orione Home in Rome, which looks after orphans and boys with physical defects.

Lebanon, Bonn Agree On Exchange

A statement issued by the Foreign Ministry said the two nations had agreed to exchange ambassadors as soon as possible.

Lebanon was one of 10 Arab nations which broke off formal ties with West Germany in 1965 after the Bonn government established diplomatic relations with Israel.

Jordan resumed relations with West Germany in 1967 and was followed by the Republic of Yemen, Sudan and Algeria—the latter two in December, 1971.

However, Lebanon was the first of the remaining six states to take up ties again following recommendation to do so by the Arab League at a meeting in mid March.

The Cotati City Council will meet in special session at 7:30 p.m. today to review proposed plans to improve water and sewer lines on East Cotati Avenue.

Busing Has Some Parental Backing

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Despite publicized accounts of opposition to forced busing across the country, a Senate education subcommittee heard testimony today that some parents are willing to accept it.

Lucy Wilson Benson, president of the League of Women Voters, said that such acceptance was true of her organization with members in more than 1,300 communities in all 50 states.

The league itself believes passage of President Nixon's proposals to curb racial busing "would have a destructive legal and psychological effect" on progress toward school desegregation, she said in testimony prepared for today's hearing.

The U.S. Civil Rights Commission said Wednesday in a formal statement that Nixon's antibusing proposals not only would slow school desegregation, but would "undermine the integrity" of the federal courts. It said the proposals would "lead us back along a road this nation should never see again."

Citing reports from league units across the country, Mrs. Benson singled out Michigan communities which she said were making progress in a state where busing is considered an especially sensitive issue. She said "community acceptance is growing daily" in Pontiac and Kalamazoo, now under court busing decrees.

Her testimony came amid renewed opposition to busing in the House sparked by a federal judge's refusal to delay consideration of stronger busing orders for Detroit.

Five Michigan Democrats, at least two of whom had voted against antibusing legislation in the past, announced Wednesday that they have signed up in support of a constitutional amendment against forced busing.

They were Reps. John D. Dingell, William D. Ford,, Martha W. Griffiths, Lucien N. Nedzi and James G. O'Hara. Among these, Ford and O'Hara in the past have consistently opposed proposed restrictions on busing.

They said their announced support of the antibusing amendment proposal resulted from the refusal of U.S. District Judge Stephen J. Roth to delay any new orders until Congress acts.

AFTER THE STORM

A spring snowstorm yesterday left this scenic view of steps leading to Chicago's Michigan Avenue bridge. Air and ground traffic was crippled by the surprise storm which swept northern and central Illinois and dropped more than 10 inches of snow in some areas, forcing closure of numerous schools.

Hruska Blasts Kleindienst Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Democrats believe they have enough votes to block any Republican attempt to end month-old hearings into the nomination of Richard G. Kleindienst as attorney general.

The hearings, which have dug into allegations that the settlement of an antitrust case against International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. was linked to an ITT contribution to the Republican National Convention, were in recess today for the Easter period. They resume D-Calif., said that if such a At that time, Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb. said he will move to bring the hearings to a close. He said the inquiry had become "irrelevant, repetitious, dilatory and obstructive."

But Sen. John V. Tunney, DCalif., said that if such a maneuver succeeded, it might leave the Republicans open to charges of a whitewash.

"I think we will win the vote," Tunney said. "...There is the feeling, even among some Republicans, that they don't want to be put in the position of whitewashing the charges."

Kleindienst was nominated to succeed John N. Mitchell, who resigned to manage President Nixon's re-election campaign. The committee originally approved Kleindienst's nomination Feb. 29 and recommended Senate confirmation, but on the same day columnist Jack Anderson published a memorandum linking the ITT antitrust settlement with support for the GOP convention in San Diego.

The next day Anderson said Kleindienst had talked with an ITT director several times while the antitrust case was pending, and the committee reopened the hearings.

New Rules On Food Stamps

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —State Social Welfare Director Robert Carleson has asked counties to notify federal food stamp users that stores can no longer give cash change for goods purchased with the stamps.

Carleson said Wednesday the stores have been told by the federal Department of Agriculture that change must be returned in 50-cent coupons.

He said the new rule is to "ensure the fullest possible use of food stamps for the purpose for which they are designed."

He said the new policy also prohibits the use of food stamps for bottle deposits, requiring that users pay cash for deposits on bottles or other returnable food containers.

Residents Can Quiz Candidates

A casual get-together at which Corte Maderans will be able to quiz the five town council candidates has been scheduled for Saturday by the Corte Madera branch of the county library.

Each of the candidates will maintain a table at which he will answer questions from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., according to library spokesmen.

Coffee and cookies will be served to add to the informal atmosphere.

Man Is Arrested For Kidnap Attempt

Richard Charles Joseph, of 26 Washington Avenue, was picked up by San Rafael police at 12:20 a.m. after Terry Lynn Schmidt reported an attempt to force her into a car as she waited for a bus at the corner of Fourth and Hetherton streets.

Miss Schmidt told police that a man drove up to her in an old car and said, "Get in the car or I'll shoot you." She refused, saying she was waiting for someone.

When a blue van approached, sha told the man, "There they are." While his head was turned, she ran down the street yelling for help. The car drove away down Tamalpais Avenue, according to her statement, and she hailed two police cars.

Moments later, a car identified by Miss Schmidt as her harasser's car, passed the parked police cars. Police pursued and Joseph was stopped at the corner of Fourth and Irwin streets.

Joseph, 31, according to police, said that he had been at the 881 Club and at the Country Club Bowl last night. "I never stopped at that bus stop," he said.

He was also arrested on suspicion of violating parole regulations. No bail was set and he was scheduled to appear in court today.

ECONOMY

days we'll begin to see this happening," she said.

At a news conference called by Democratic House leaders, Speaker Carl Albert said a new freeze on wages and prices might be in order and once inflation is curbed and the economy is "moving again" a tax increase should be enacted.

Albert charged that President Nixon's economic controls have been harder on wages than on prices.

Asked if he thought it time to reverse recent tax trends and enact new tax boosts to help balance the budget, Albert commented: "I don't think it's time now for a tax increase. I think first we've got to get the economy moving again. And then we ought to have a tax increase."

William Mitchell, president of Safeway Stores Inc., and spokesman for the grocers, said the executives agreed to "go back and take a real close look at what we're doing" as the result of some tough talk from Connally and other officials.

"The secretary is a very persuasive person," Mitchell said of Connally, "and I think you'll see some meat prices going down in the next few weeks. I would expect beef prices will be down in the next few weeks to freeze levels."

Agriculture Department officials released figures today that tended to confirm Mitchell's predictions. Wholesale beef prices have dropped 5 cents a pound over the last six weeks and are at about the same level as when the wage-price freeze was imposed last August.

Raw agricultural products such as meat were exempt from the freeze, and continued to rise during the freeze period.

There was no indication, however, whether the lower wholesale prices have been reflected in lower retail prices to the consumer.

The freeze period was from mid-August to mid-November. It was calculated that it would take about a 15-cent per pound drop in the average retail price of beef to bring it back down to those levels. Meat prices last month jumped by their biggest margin in 14 years.

Hearing Set On Bad Check

A preliminary hearing has been set for April 4 in Marin Municipal Court for a San Francisco man accused of paying for a Porsche at a Mill Valley auto agency with a bad check.

Robert M. Newman, 56, has pleaded innocent to charges of grand theft and possessing a check with intent to defraud.

Police said Newman bought a 1971 Porsche on March 4 at Mill Valley Imports, writing a $4,029 check for it. His bank in Chicago reportedly said that Newman had written more than $10,000 worth of checks on an account that contained only $800.

comes from those we believed to be our friends" he said.

He reviewed the decisions which led to imposition of direct British rule and his own resignation, and said he now spoke "as leader of the Unionist Party."

The bond between Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom had been "sealed by blood and sacrifice on both sides" he said. "We have seen the life of our province ruined." But he urged respect for the law and pledged his cooperation with Whitelaw.

"No new system can be made to work without our willing cooperation" he said on behalf of the Protestant majority in Northern Ireland.

"We shall not be truculent or unreasonable. We shall make a constructive contribution.

"Above all let us ensure we never descend to violence or intimidation" Faulkner said.

Wednesday's bombs were both planted in stolen vehicles, a common tactic during the recent violence.

Security forces spotted both vehicles before the blasts, thanks to a parking ban which was one of the last actions of Faulkner's government. They cleared the areas, reducing casualties.

Maj. Bernard C. Calladene, 39, of the army's bomb disposal squad, was only a few feet from the second bomb when it exploded. He was killed, the 292nd person to die since violence broke out 31 months ago in Northern Ireland and the 56th army fatality. Two weeks ago two army bomb experts died under similar circumstances.

Hostage In Shoot-Out Takes Stand

SAN JOSE (UPI)—A woman taken hostage in the 1970 Marin County Courthouse shootings testified at the Angela Davis trial today that a telephone threat to kill Judge Harold Haley unless the Soledad Brothers were freed was made from the courtroom itself.

Mrs. Maria Elena Graham, a dark-haired housewife in her early 40s and first witness to be called by the prosecution, said that convict James McClain picked up the telephone and called the sheriff's office while other prisoners held the court at gunpoint.

Mrs. Graham said McClain said "they wanted the Soledad Brothers free or they would kill the judge."

Prosecutor Albert W. Harris Jr., in his opening statement, has said that Miss Davis was part of a conspiracy to free the Soledad Brothers, particularly George Jackson, although she was not in the courtroom itself.

After only a few questions, Harris turned the witness over to Chief Defense Attorney Howard Moore Jr. for cross-examination.

Mrs. Graham had appeared on the verge of breaking down several times Wednesday as she gave an account of the bloody events in which four persons were killed and she was wounded, and Moore told her that if she felt upset today, he would ask for a brief recess. She declined.

Mrs. Graham had testified Wednesday that shortly after the hostages were herded into a yellow van outside the courthouse, McClain asked Jonathan Jackson, 17, where they were going and that Jackson said, "to the San Francisco Airport."

The prosecution has said that Miss Davis may have been waiting at the airport for them.

"Are you absolutely certain and positive that you heard Jonathan Jackson say that?" Moore asked.

"Yes, I am," Mrs. Graham replied.

"There's no doubt in your mind?"

"No."

Mrs. Graham, one of five hostages taken at the 1970 kidnapings and shootings, nearly broke down Wednesday as she told of seeing Judge Haley's "face blown off—his teeth hanging out" after he was killed by a shotgun blast.

Previous to Mrs. Graham's testimony Wednesday, Miss Davis declared she was innocent of all the charges and called the state's case a tissue of speculation, conjecture and "male chauvinism."

Miss Davis, in her opening remarks, said the evidence would show how guns registered in her name could have come into the possession of young Jackson without her knowledge. Wearing a maroon miniskirt and a flowered blouse, with hoop earrings dangling below her huge Afro hairdo, Miss Davis stood at a lecturn and addressed the jury in a mostly unemotional tone much as she once lectured philosophy students at UCLA.

But she loosed scathing remarks at the case outlined by prosecutor Albert W. Harris Jr., who sat motionless a few feet away and interrupted only once to object that the defendant had strayed from a proper opening statement.

"Mr. Harris has pictured me as a sinister, selfish, emotional woman whose unbounded passion for George Jackson was such" that she would do anything to free him.

The evidence will show that she had attended rallies and worked for the freedom of all three Soledad Brothers, not just George Jackson, she said. She pointed out that the two remaining Soledad Brothers — Fleeta Drumgo and John Clutchette — had been acquitted this week of charges of killing a guard. Then, her voice faltering, she said:

"And if George Jackson had not been struck down by a prison guard he too would have been freed."

Assault Suspect Is Bound Over

Robert Ray Coleman, 21, of Marin City, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon stemming from the shooting of another man in Marin City Feb. 11.

Coleman is to be arraigned April 12.

The shooting victim, Charles A. Schoenig, 21, of San Francisco, was hospitalized with a bullet wound in his abdomen. The incident apparently occurred during an agrument over a traffic accident after Schoenig went to Marin City to discuss it with Coleman.

Illicit Drug Traffic Along The Italy-France Border

By TAKASHI OKA
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

The only thing suspicious about the passenger car, customs officer Jacques De Angelis decided was its Turkish license plates.

The police, whose duty it was to check the passports and identities of the car's occupants, had found all in order. The distinguished looking man in the back seat was Kudret Baihan, a lawyer and a member of the Turkish Senate, and he carried a diplomatic passport. In the front seat was his driver, Ibrahim Ikier, also a Turk. His passport also was in order.

With five million cars passing the Menton border checkpoint from Italy into France every year, examinations had to be selective if the border authorities were not to cause horrendous traffic jams all the way up the Italian coast.

But De Angelis had standing instructions to search all cars with Middle Eastern license plates. The great artery of the narcotics traffic begins in Turkey, where the pungently sweet raw opium grown by Anatolian peasants is transformed into morphine base, which is 10 times less bulky and which does not smell.

From Turkey the route leads by land or by sea to southern France and its great port of Marseille. Here the morphine base is refined into pure heroin, and then shipped to its final destination, the United States, by all the ingenious traditional and modern ways that criminal minds can devise.

So the customs officer proceeded politely to undertake a routine search of the car's interior. Feeling the back seat, he sensed it to be stuffed in a strange manner. It did not take him long to discover some small packets wrapped in white cloth and containing a brownish powder — morphine base.

The car was then given a thorough going over. The same small packets of brownish powder were found stuffed under the front and back seats, inside the doors, and in all the other nooks and crevices of the car, which bore a Turkish trademark, Anadol.

Despite his angry protests, the distinguished-looking Turkish senator was hustled off to jail in Nice, along with his driver, there to undergo a relentless round of questioning from the narcotics brigade of the Police Judiciaire, the investigative police.

"No, neither we nor the customs knew in advance that this particular car was coming," recalled Marcel Morin, chief of the narcotics brigade in Marseille. "If we had, it might have been more interesting not to have arrested the occupants but to have trailed the car to see where it went."

What Morin would have hoped for, ideally, would have been for the Turkish senator in his Anadol car to lead the police straight to some clandestine laboratory transforming morphine base into pure white heroin powder. These laboratories, often described, seldom found, are believed to operate at irregular intervals in villas along the Cote d'Azur or in Marseille itself.

Last August John Cusack, then representative of the American Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, caused a furor when he was quoted in an interview as saying that there were "big wheels" protecting the narcotics trade and the laboratories in France. Cusack has since been recalled, and the French police have substantially increased their narcotics control agents in the area. Morin is a relatively recent arrival, having taken over the narcotics post in Marseille last September on direct transfer from a high post in Paris.

In all, customs agents seized 146 kilograms (about 320 pounds) of morphine base from a Turkish car, while Baihan continued to insist that he knew nothing about his illicit cargo and that he was only on his way to Lyons to buy some wedding clothes for his daughter.

Transformed into heroin, the morphine base would have fetched 1,460,000 francs or $292,000, in France, five times that amount landed in New York, and 20 times the New York landed price by the time it reached the retailer in the street.

For the French authorities, the seizure of the Turkish morphine base March 6 capped a fabulous week: Only a couple of days before, customs agents boarding and searching a shrimp boat outside Villefranche Harbor on the Cote d'Azur had found 425 kilograms of pure heroin — the largest haul in history of the deadly drug.

That exploit, in turn, brought congratulatory telegrams from French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing, to whose ministry the customs service belongs, and from New York police.

Jean Carre, the brusquely efficient director of the customs service's investigative branch in Marseille — the Service des Enquetes Douanieres — was both proud of his men's exploits and reticent about their methods when interviewed in his modest office in the Marseille customs house.

Besides the French narcotics police and the customs agents, there is a third group of agents centered in Marseille who try to keep track of drug smugglers and their devious ways. These are the Americans, a tight-lipped handful of agents who work out of the handsome old American consulate on Rue Arminy.

As foreigners, they have no powers of search or arrest: they are in Marseille strictly as guests of the French government, pursuant to an agreement signed between the French Ministry of the Interior and the American Department of Justice a year ago.

In Marseille they enjoy a reputation for paying well for information, but they have been making every effort to avoid giving offense to the French — especially since Cusack's recall — and if they had any indirect share in the recent successes of their French partners, they are saying nothing about it.

In any case, Marseille and vicinity gradually seems to be becoming a less comfortable place for the drug merchants than it has been in the past. Morin brought 12 agents down with him from Paris, and he has a staff of about 80 engaged in all aspects of narcotics control — not only investigation and arrest, but also in preventive, public relations work directed at the general public.

"Since we came in September," Morin said, "The local price of heroin has been going up steadily. We've been driving the traffickers out of the market. But Marseille is a special and terrible case. Here our local problem is with youngsters from the age of 15 to 25 years, and whereas in other areas they get their first taste for drugs from marijuana, here they start directly on heroin. Then the contagion spreads, because very often an addict, in order to obtain the 150 to 200 francs he needs for his daily dose, will become a retailer of heroin himself."

After a full day at the office, Morin frequently spends an evening enthusiastically participating in a seminar or debate on drug problems for parents, teachers, and other members of the community.

Not long ago he invited a couple of journalists to accompany him to one such meeting in a small town about 25 miles from Marseille. The small hall of the House of Youth and Culture was filled to overflowing, and the meeting went on without interruption from 8:30 to past midnight.

In France it is still rare to see a high-ranking police officer like Morin actively seeking out the public to enlist its cooperation and to respond to its concerns.

But as one of his staff aides, who participated in the meeting, said later, "This fight against drugs is the first fight we police have been engaged in, in which I really felt we were in a common front with politicians, civil servants, teachers, parents, religious leaders — everybody. Everyone is concerned. Everyone wants results. That is the one hopeful thing I can say about this campaign, and it is what gives me confidence that eventually we will succeed."

Eric Ansley Van Horn, 21, of Mill Valley, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to felony charges of drunken driving and manslaughter stemming from the death of a 19-year-old youth in an accident Saturday.

A preliminary hearing was set for April 11. Bail for Van Horn was reduced from $10,000 to $5,000 in court yesterday.

He was the driver of a pickup truck which went over a bank near Panoramic Highway, according to highway patrol officers.

'Lost' Cases Stall Courthouse Display

Two air tight display cases, specially built for display of memorabilia found in the old Marin County Courthouse cornerstone box, apparently have been lost in shipping.

County Librarian Bruce D. Bajema said today the county's purchasing department is trying to trace the shipment but so far has drawn a blank.

The two cases, built in Kentucky at a cost of $1,400, should have arrived in Marin during early March to coincide with the opening of the century-old time capsule.

However, in the three weeks since the box was carefully opened, nothing has been seen of the cases.

"I could have built them myself by now," Bajema said with an edge in his voice, betraying the dozen or so calls he has a day inquiring when the display will be set up.

The contents — including several valuable old coins — were to have been displayed for three months at the Civic Center Library before being reburied in June along with modern day artifacts.

Bajema said the reburial date may be moved back once the cases are received to allow adequate viewing time.

Pending the arrival of the cases, the old papers and coins are being stored in an air tight safe in Berkeley.

Tools Taken

Tools worth $150 were stolen from a car parked at Mary and Union streets in San Rafael, after burglars forced the right wing window. Jim Jow Lowry, of San Francisco, told police that his tools were taken between 9 p.m. Tuesday and 8:30 a.m. yesterday.

Roofers Return To Their Jobs

FRESNO (UPI) —Some 80 roofers in four counties on strike for a week in a dispute over retroactive pay affected by the wage freeze have returned to work.

Spokesmen for the Roofers Local 27 said Tuesday the roofers had gained a 65-cent hourly pay and fringe benefit increase prior to the Aug. 15 wage freeze.

They said they later received approval for retroactive payment of the increase from the federal Pay Board but management refused to go along.

Following negotiations completed Monday night the roofers were to receive 50 cents of the increase up to Feb. 15 and the full amount thereafter.

Work Furlough Inmate At Quentin Takes Walk

A San Quentin inmate on the work furlough program walked away from the barracks outside the west gate today, said Joseph R. O'Brien, information officer.

Michael John Myers, 26, who has been working as a roofer in the East Bay, left about 4 a.m., O'Brien reported. Myers had a visitor about 3:30 a.m. and was reprimanded by a correctional officer. He disappeared about 30 minutes later and has not been found, according to O'Brien.

Myers was sent to San Quentin in 1965 for first degree robbery from San Mateo County. He was placed on parole and was returned to the prison in July of last year for car theft from Santa Clara County, O'Brien said. Myers was due to be paroled July 27 this year, according to O'Brien.

14 Feared Dead Aboard U.S. Plane

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Command said today 14 Americans were missing and presumed dead aboard a supersecret C130 gunship shot down by a Communist missile in Laos. Front dispatches reported major Communist artillery and ground attacks along the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

The dispatches said the Communist offensive appeared aimed at knocking out South Vietnam's northern defensive line and that the fighting appeared to be the heaviest in Indochina in a year. The battles were still going on at nightfall.

Field reports said North Vietnamese in one of the rare uses of big artillery guns bombarded five key South Vietnamese positions below the DMZ and tried to storm three others on the ground in coordinated, noontime attacks. Some U.S. advisers at DMZ outposts were reported caught up in the clashes.

U. S. officers returning from the region said every available American F4 Phantom fighter-bomber was used to batter North Vietnamese artillery positions in the area and the advancing ground troops, but they declined to say whether any of the U.S. planes struck into North Vietnam itself.

Military sources in Saigon said tonight as far as they knew none of the DMZ outposts had been captured as of early evening. They said it was too early to tell if it was simply a "one shot deal" or whether the North Vietnamese were going all out to capture the heavily bunkered "Siegfried Line" fortifications below the buffer zone.

The sketchy field reports said North Vietnamese fired more than 500 rounds of rockets, mortar and heavy artillery fire at the town of Dong Ha and four DMZ outposts—Alpha 2, Alpha 4, Charlie 2 and Camp Carrol. They said there were heavy ground attacks against three other bases, Sarge, Nui Ba Ho and Holcomb and that fighting was going on 10 hours later.

There is a small detachment of U.S. Marines at Alpha 4, just below the DMZ. They serve as forward spotters for U.S. 7th Fleet warships operating off the Vietnamese coast.

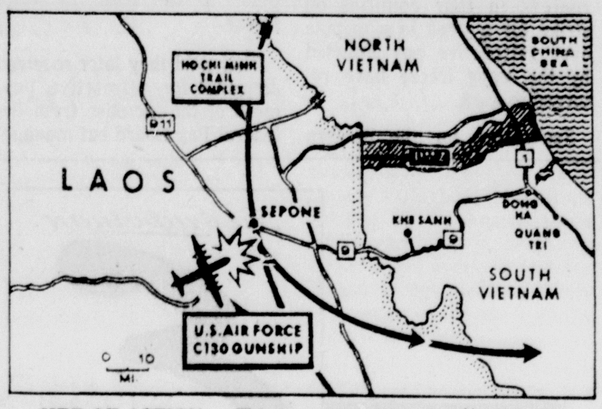
The field reports said the fighting was the heaviest in Indochina since the South Vietnamese drive into Laos last spring with U.S. air and artillery support. The attacks followed warnings by U.S. intelligence officers that the Communists might try to break through toward Quang Tri and Hue.

Field reports also told of heavy fighting on the hilltops overlooking the A Shau Valley 75 miles below the DMZ where government troops were said to have killed 87 guerrillas by late today at a loss of three dead and 25 wounded. South Vietnamese said today's toll raised to 826 the number of Communists killed in three weeks of fighting there.

The C130 shot down in Laos on Wednesday was a heavily computerized flying battleship with secret electronic equipment which can seek out Communist troops in the dark. It was the third lost in Laos but the first downed by Surface-to-Air (SAM) missiles.

The U.S. command, which delayed its report of the incident until rescue operations could be attempted, said no parachutes were seen billowing from the plane but teams will be sent in to try to recover the bodies.

If all the men were killed it would be the largest number of Americans dead in a single incident in Laos during the Indochina war and apparently the largest U.S. casualty toll in Indochina since October.



SITE OF ACTION — This map pinpoints where a U.S. Air Force C130 gunship with 14 men aboard was shot down yesterday by a Communist surface-to-air missile over the Laotian panhandle. Today, the U.S. Command in Saigon said the crew reported missing is presumed dead.

(UPI Telephoto map)

One American soldier also was killed in a guerrilla attack on the night defensive position of a U.S. unit 30 miles east of Saigon. Two other soldiers were killed in the same area earlier in the day in a boobytrap explosion. All the men were members of the 3rd Brigade, 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

Two other Americans died when they slipped and fell into a jet fuel tank at the Long Binh Army base outside Saigon.

In its weekly report, the command said four Americans were killed in action and 13 others wounded in Indochina last week. It boosted the number of Americans killed in the war since 1961 to 45,669.

The South Vietnamese command said 445 government troopers were killed last week—the highest toll since June, 1971 when 452 died. Communist deaths were put at 1,981.

Mills Proposes Inflation Curbs

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas proposed new anti-inflation steps in Massachusetts and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace attacked busing in Tennessee Thursday, while most of the other Democratic presidential candidates campaigned in Wisconsin.

On the Republican side, Rep. John M. Ashbrook of Ohio prepared to take legal steps so his name would be listed opposite President Nixon on the May 2 primary ballot in Indiana.

Ashbrook filed for the Indiana primary shortly before last Thursday's noon deadline, but state election authorities denied his petition, ruling that it did not have enough qualified signatures.

Ashbrook's campaign manager, Robert E. Hughes, said the U.S. District Court at Indianapolis would be asked to intervene Friday on behalf of Ashbrook, the only Republican contesting Nixon's nomination for a second term.

Mills told a Boston news conference Wednesday that present controls on wages and prices may have to be extended to profits, food costs and interest rates to curb inflation.

Mills, who has the power to bring such legislation into being as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he would wait "just a few more weeks" before proposing the broader anti-inflation attack.

To thunderous applause from Tennessee legislators in Nashville, Wallace lashed out at high taxes, welfare, lawlessness and busing to achieve racial balance. Wallace said the antibusing campaign that brought him a primary victory in Florida has caused other candidates to adopt his position.

Sen. George S. McGovern's office in Washington made more disclosures of campaign contributions. McGovern received more than $240,000 between Feb. 28 and March 10, with nearly one-third coming from Max Palevsky, a Xerox Corp. executive and cochairman of the McGovern for President Committee in California.

McGovern, the first candidate to reveal his sources of campaign funds, said he would continue to make periodic disclosures to keep the voters informed of his financial backing.

McGovern, and Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, Edmund S. Muskie and Henry M. Jackson, and New York Mayor John V. Lindsay resumed stumping in Wisconsin today after an unplanned 24-hour recess caused by a snowstorm.

Lindsay, through his New York campaign headquarters, disclosed that he would enter a full slate of delegates in Oregon's May 23 primary.

Rail Carmen Hit Changes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A suit seeking to stop the Public Utilities Commission from putting proposed schedule changes into effect has been filed by municipal railway carmen.

Transport Workers Union Local 250-A brought the action Wednesday and asked for an injunction to restrain what the union called a breach of collective bargaining agreements.

The union charges that the PUC took unilateral action to cut back service without consultation with the carmen.

Death Penalty Panel Is Formed

Formation of a Let the People Decide Committee has been announced in Marin to aid a statewide drive for reinstatement of the death penalty.

Raymond Kesner of Larkspur, committee chairman, said the group will circulate petitions aimed at putting a constitutional amendment on the ballot in November. About 520,000 signatures will be needed statewide.

The death penalty was ruled unconstitutional last month by the state Supreme Court, but Kesner said the Marin committee believes the court acted "in accordance with social philosophy rather than the law."

HUD Claims Corruption Cleaned Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — A spokesman for the Department of Housing and Urban Development said today new procedures had been adopted to eliminate corruption revealed Wednesday in indictments handed down against 50 defendants in connection with an alleged housing mortgage fraud.

HUD Regional Administrator S. William Green said that "strong and effective measures have been taken in the Hempstead and all FHA insuring offices to weed out corruption, fraud, and bribery from the operation of our programs."

Green's remarks came one day after U.S. Attorney Robert Morse announced the indictment of 40 individuals and 10 corporations for bribery and fraud in the foreclosure of $200 million in Federal Housing Administration insured mortgages on 2,500 Brooklyn and Queens homes.

Included among the defendants were the investment firm of Dun and Bradstreet, one of its officials, FHA employes, private attorneys, bankers, realtors, appraisers and a major credit rating company.

A main target of the investigation was the Eastern Service Corp., whose offices are located in the same building in Hempstead on Long Island, where the FHA has its state headquarters.

Thirty of the defendants were arraigned in federal court Wednesday and were released on personal bonds.

Two key figures named in the indictment, President Harry Bernstein of Eastern Service, and his wife, Rose, did not appear in court and it was reported the FBI were searching for them in Florida.

Jeffrey Austin Due Eagle Scout Rank

Jeffrey M. Austin of Fairfax will be awarded the rank of eagle scout at a Court of Honor at 7:30 p.m. April 24 at Deer Park school.

He has been a member of Troop 49 since 1967 and has served as troop quartermaster and senior instructor. He is a member of the Order of the Arrow.

For his eagle project, he conducted a "Get out the Vote" campaign in Fairfax in 1970. He has headed four Scout-O-Rama booths for his troop. He has 22 merit badges.

Austin, 15, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Austin of 2 Archangle Court, Fairfax. His father also achieved the rank of eagle.

He is a sophomore at Sir Francis Drake High School where he is a member of the honor crew, the soccer and tennis teams.

His hobbies include photography, back-packing and all water sports, including sailing, water skiing and skin diving. His ambitions include becoming an aquanaut or forest ranger.

Burglary Counts Denied In Court

Sheldon A. Watson, 21, of San Anselmo, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin superior court to six counts of burglary in connection with thefts committed in his city last August.

A jury trial was set for the week of April 24.

Watson walked into the San Anselmo police station earlier this month to say he was responsible for a series of burglaries including two businesses and four residences.

Talley, Dorigo To Be Arraigned

Two men arrested in connection with the holdup of a Corte Madera store March 11 have been bound over to Marin Superior Court.

Due to be arraigned April 12 are Leroy H. Dorigo, 24, of Sonora, and Philip Ray Talley, 32, of nearby Columbia.

They were arrested in San Rafael about a half-hour after a robbery at the 7-11 store on Corte Madera Avenue. Two men wielding a knife and a razor made off with $280 in the robbery, police said.

The Bike Back Fighting Crime

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Policemen have rediscovered the bicycle as a weapon against crime.

As an experiment, two officers in a high crime section near Johns Hopkins Hospital volunteered to abandon their patrol cars and share a bicycle. The results were so good that five more bikes were purchased. They go into use starting Sunday.

"We found the bike was a tremendous immediate liaison between the officer and the residents," said Dennis Hill, spokesman for the department. "Kids came to know him quickly and residents began to look for him on his rounds."

BBs Shot At Door

Vandals fired two BBs at the home of Sara Louise Kaiser at 97 San Marino Drive in San Rafael, shattering the sliding glass door to the dining room. Susan K. Distler, daughter of Mrs. Kaiser, told police the shooting occurred between March 20 and yesterday.

Cleared Mulligan Wants To Work Again For State

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Kerry Mulligan, former chief state water pollution official cleared of charges of trying to bribe a political associate of the Honolulu mayor, says he plans to discuss with Gov. Ronald Reagan possible appointment to another post.

Reagan's office appeared to shut the door on accepting Mulligan back.

Honolulu Prosecuting Attorney Barry Chung announced he will drop charges of attempted bribery against Mulligan and two former executives of a Southern California consulting firm, Engineering Sciences Inc. of Arcadia.

But the firm itself was fined $5,000 in Honolulu Circuit Court on Wednesday after pleading "no contest" to making an improper campaign contribution. Chung said he also will drop a bribery charge against ESI.

"I feel this vindicates me completely," said Mulligan who resigned the $26,250-a-year post as chairman of the state Water Resources Control Board at Reagan's request.

"It's been a very traumatic and terrible experience for me."

He said he has made no definite plans for future employment but wants to meet with Reagan, discuss the situation and offer "whatever talents I might have" as a pollution fighter for possible appointment to a different state post.

"There has never been anything in my public service that would be detrimental to me being appointed to something else in the future."

Shortly after disclosure of the Honolulu allegations, Reagan on Jan. 24 asked for Mulligan's resignation and insisted the action was "irrespective" of the charges. He said Mulligan acted as a consultant to a private firm which sought contracts outside California.

Finch's Views On Death Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The death penalty should be kept for slayers of prison guards and criminals who kill during commission of a felony, Presidential Counselor Robert H. Finch says.

Finch, a potential candidate for U.S. Senator or governor, said Wednesday he would "not necessarily make the death penalty as broad" as it has been.

Responding to a question about abolition of the death penalty in California by the state Supreme Court, the former lieutenant governor said he did not believe it is a deterrent to crimes of passion.

But he told newsmen before making a speech to the Comstock Club of Sacramento that the death penalty is a "valid deterrent" in cases where a prison guard is slain by an inmate and when someone is killed by an armed criminal during commission of a felony.

"I would keep the death penalty in those two cases," he said.

Meanwhile, state Attorney General Evelle J. Younger urged local district attorneys to meet with local law enforcement officials and encourage "voluntary participation" in an initiative drive aimed at restoring the death penalty.

In a letter to the state's 50 district attorneys, Younger also asked them to allow their offices to be used as pickup points for the initiative petition that was filed last month by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach.

"We all agree that it would be improper to use public funds or time of county employes in this effort," the state's top law enforcement officer said. "However, it would not be improper to use your office as a pickup point for the petitions."

Younger also asked the district attorneys to issue a news release next month telling volunteers where they can get petitions for circulation.

The signature-gathering effort for the measure, which would allow Californians to vote on a constitutional amendment restoring the death penalty, is being led by a group formed by the California Correctional Officers Association.

The measure's supporters need 500,000 signatures to put the proposal on the November general election ballot.

Angela's Friend In Fee Problem

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A municipal court judge has ordered Fresno rancher Rodger McAfee, who posted Angela Davis' bail, to pay architect Robert Batchelor $3,531 in damages.

Batchelor had charged McAfee with failing to pay him for architectural work McAfee had commissioned. The work was to be a project for Fresno which was never undertaken. Judge Harry W. Low made the ruling Wednesday.

San Rafael Egg Hunt Saturday

An Easter egg hunt sponsored by the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday in Albert Park, San Rafael.

The egg hunt will be for children aged 1 to 9 and will start upon the arrival of the Easter bunny.

Majority Favoring Rural Mill Valley

By MARC NURRE

Four of six candidates for the Mill Valley City Council today agreed that keeping the city rural and holding down taxes were the central campaign issues, and differed primarily on the methods of accomplishing the task.

A fifth centered his comments on expanding police and fire services and a sixth was not present on the KTIM, "Marin Sounding Board" program.

Incumbent Jerome C. Hauke, attorneys Robert E. Burton and Robert E. Capron and Gerald J. Hood, director of the County Human Rights Commission all pledged to work for the acquisition of open space in the city, push for stronger controls on development and work to decrease city taxes and look for other sources of money to run the city.

Real estate man Dolph F. Jaeger called for expansion of police and fire departments in the city and purchase of more fire equipment. Artist Thomas N. Belsky was not present.

Most of the issues covered had been similarly dealt with at a previous candidates' night in Mill Valley.

The panel of candidates differed, however, on the issue of a salary for councilmen, brought up by Jaeger. He said if elected he would work to abolish the $150 per month salary, which is to take effect after the election, and if unseccessful would donate his $150 to a worthy cause.

Hauke, who voted for the salary when it came before the council, defended his position. He said he spent from 70 to 90 nights per year out on city business, sometimes had to take time off work to attend mettings, and felt the $150 was merely an attempt to compensate for the work.

Hood supported the idea, but said it was a misnomer to call the money a salary. It should be thought of as a reimbursement for expenses, he said.

Capron said he supported the idea of the reimbursement, but that if elected, he would try to submit the issue to the voters and follow their wishes.

Burton said he favored the idea of a salary, but that in an election two years ago, voters already turned down the idea, and that because of that, the current council should not have established the salary.

A question from a listener about what to do with "transient" residents of the town also provoked differing views.

"It's very difficult to control how people live," said Burton. "I don't believe Mill Valley should make that attempt." He said he felt no real problem existed.

Hauke said the problem was similar to any police problem and required respect on both sides to solve it. He said police were doing a good job in handling the difficulty.

Hood said the city should allow the free flow of persons into the community "who will contribute to the community."

Another caller asked Burton, a member of the planning commission, why the commission approved a plan for the redevelopment of Miller Avenue if Army engineers planned to tear the area up for a flood control channel.

Burton said the plan was approved because any flood control work was far in the future and that if put in, it would run under a traffic lane of the street anyway.

Hauke said he doubted whether there would ever be a flood control project, and that the city could not wait in any event, to upgrade the street.

The show will be re-broadcast on Sunday at 10:05 a.m.

Bamboo Combo In The Philippines

MANILA (UPI)—A group of Filipino youngsters called Pangkat Kawayan (Bamboo Band), which uses bamboo musical instruments, is expected to leave in April on a world tour.

The group, ranging in age from seven to 14, is composed of students of an elementary school in nearby Quezon City. It is said to be the only band of its kind in the world.

Governor's Mail Attacks Court On Death Penalty

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan's mail is running 45-1 against the state Supreme Court's landmark decision abolishing capital punishment in California.

The reaction ranges from an angry Lemon Grove man who warned the next step would be "free runs" for "rabid dogs" to a Long Beach woman who commended the state's highest tribunal for a "step forward."

Edwin Gray, the governor's press secretary, said Wednesday 3,949 letters and telegrams have been received since the Feb. 18 ruling and all but 85 of them urge restoration of capital punishment.

The attorney general's office said it has received approximately 500 letters on the issue with a ratio of 15-1 against the court's ruling.

In a 6-1 decision, the state Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty violated the state constitution because it amounted to "cruel and unusual punishment."

Many of the opponents expressed shock, anger and frustration over the decision and volunteered to circulate petitions to place on the November ballot an initiative to put capital punishment back on the books. Supporters argued that the death penalty had not deterred crimes and only God had the right to take a life.

A sampling of Reagan's mailbag on the Supreme Court ruling:

—"It certainly appears that the court has now told the criminals that they will hold the criminal's coat while he beats to death the citizen of his choice."—a Santa Monica man.

—"They are worse than old ladies in tennis shoes. We must get those antiquated ancient erratic crime sympathizers into retirement."—a Los Angeles woman using the prefix "Ms" before her name.

It's Feeding Time —It's Army Time

By DICK SMULLEN

Robert E. Cooper is doing a two-year hitch for Uncle Sam, doint it at the Louise A. Boyd Museum of Science in San Rafael.

Cooper, 20, is a conscientious objector who began working as an "animal keeper" at the museum March 16. He cleans cages, feeds the zoo's animals and does routine maintenance.

A 1970 graduate of Sir Frances Drake High School, Cooper learned from the government May 4, 1971, that he had been accepted as a conscientious objector. In his application, he claimed exemption from both combatant and noncombatant army status "by reason of religious training", although he was not attending an organized church at that time, and says he still does not.

In a written statement accompanying the application, Cooper said "only God has the right to kill people." He says he believes in the oneness of mankind, and that war is unnecessary.

Unlike many who claim to be conscientious objectors, Cooper did not first decide under the hot breath of the draft. "When I was 15 I told my parents I wasn't going to go. As the time approached, they began to believe me," he said the other day.

He says that while his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl G. Cooper of San Rafael, did not agree with his decision, "they're proud of me for making up my mind and sticking to it."

Cooper, who lives with an aunt at 270 Greenfield Avenue, San Anselmo, volunteered for alternate service at the museum after the government ordered him to a work camp 25 miles north of Red Bluff. He said "it blew my mind" to find he could be ordered anywhere, after becoming a conscientious objector.

"I don't feel anyone has the right to order anybody to do anything. There is such a thing as common courtesy," he said. Cooper favors asking, instead of ordering.

Besides his religious objection to killing, Cooper has a deep rooted dislike for regimentation, which he says is prevalent in work camps. He said the men wear the same type of clothes and live in barracks-like buildings.

Opposed to the idea, Cooper says he first considered not going, then volunteered last February to work at the Boyd Museum, about a month before he was to report to the camp.

He says he went to Stephen Siegel, executive director of the museum and asked, "How'd you like to have me for 35 hours a week, free?" Siegel accepted immediately, but a delay in paperwork from the government stalled the starting date until March 16.

Cooper's approach to his draft board is typical of his approach to life in general. "I was honest with them. You treat them like people, they'll treat you like people."

He says "You just can't go around with an attitude that you've got to rip people off . . . with all the things there are going on in the world, you've got to be good to people."

SWEET TOUCH — Robert E. Cooper, a conscientious objector serving his two year commitment at the Louise A. Boyd Marin Museum of Science in San Rafael, makes friends with Teddy, the museum's black bear. (Independent-Journal photo by Alfred M. Arn)

Cooper is not a newcomer to the museum. A native of Moultree, Georgia, he came to San Rafael with his family when he was in second grade. Two years later he started going to see the animals.

With his family living nearby on D Street, he said he was doing then what many neighborhood children still do, "going down on weekends to help around the place."

He's also familiar with the museum's subject, Marin County. As a sixth grader, Cooper said, he began hiking, first in the San Rafael area, then all over the county. Even after hitchhiking over most of the United States, he says he is still awed by Marin's scenery.

He says he is surprised by the number of people who live in the county, but are not really aware of the things it has to offer. San Rafael's general attitude toward the Boyd Museum is a microcosm of this attitude, he said. "For all the people who live in this town, few of them really know we're here" (at 76 Albert Park Lane).

He says he'll especially enjoy working with the animals, which he describes as totally honest. Cooper has an Irish setter, Ginger, that accompanied him on his cross-country trip.

Water District Adds 260 Acres

The North Marin County Water District board has approved annexation of the 260-acre former Martinelli Ranch, north of Point Reyes Station, to the Point Reyes-Inverness Park Improvement District.

The vote was 4-1 with director Patrick H. Heffernan dissenting. Heffernan has consistently opposed expanding district services because of a fear of too much growth.

Markham Corp. plans to build a 51-lot subdivision and directors set a maximum of 60 single-family dwelling units.

Directors approved the annexation at a meeting at West Marin School Tuesday night attended by about a dozen persons, reported Dist. Mgr. Eugene S. Churchill.

Jerry Friedman, chairman of the Environmental Action Committee of West Marin, said the majority of that committee didn't oppose the annexation, Churchill said.

Complaint About Dealers On Car Warning Devices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spot check of new car dealers in Washington showed that salesmen have been telling customers how to disconnect the government-required seat belt warning devices, an independent safety organization said today.

Under federal safety regulations, cars manufactured after Jan. 1, 1972, must be equipped with a passive restraint system such as an air bag, or with a warning and buzzer which can be turned off only when the seat belt is buckled. Manufacturers have not gone to the air bag, but are turning out cars with the warning system.

The National Safety Council said 55,000 persons died on the nation's highways in 1971, and predicted that the total could be cut by 8,000 to 10,000 a year if all drivers used seat belts. Under law, a dealer who disconnects a belt on a car before it is sold can be fined up to $1,000 for each violation.

William Haddon Jr., president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, and the former head of the government's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said the dealers were telling customers how the devices "can be either circumvented or disconnected".

RECORD-SETTING BALLOONIST

Matt Wiederkehr appeared somewhat apprehensive prior to his takeoff early yesterday in his hot-air balloon. He was setting out from St. Paul, Minn., to break the four-hour, 51-minute balloon endurance record. He broke the record shortly after noon yesterday, and at last reports he was still going strong. Outside of turbulence, Wiederkehr said everything was "just great." (UPI Telephoto)

Judge Asks Cool-Off In Bolinas Spat

A Marin Superior Court judge yesterday attempted to cool off a fuss between a group of Bolinas businessmen and the Bolinas Community Public Utilities District by advising them to settle their problems in court.

"Let's not have a bunch of sand thrown out there," Judge Henry J. Broderick told lawyers for both sides during a court hearing in which both sides made claims of harrassment.

The businessmen are fighting higher water rates and sewer charges approved by the district board in January.

They also want $100,000 in damages from the district, claiming the rates are discriminatory.

Broderick gave attorneys Vernon L. Bradley, who represents the businessmen, and Paul Kayfetz, the district's lawyer, until April 10 to file memoranda in the case.

America Second

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans are showing more inclination to spend their vacations abroad, according to travel surveys by the American Automobile Association (AAA). The surveys, conducted biennially since 1963, show that travel in the United States has dropped from 80 per cent of all trips in 1963 to 75 per cent.

Hilarita Housing Suit Ruling Within Week

A Marin Superior Court judge is expected to make a decision within a week as to whether six Tiburon residents can legally halt the planned $2.9 million moderate-income project in their city.

(A seventh person, Edith Wineman, who originally filed suit against the project, has withdrawn.)

Judge E. Warren McGuire yesterday took the case under submission after listening to three days of testmony in which the City of Tiburon, Marin County Housing Authority, Tiburon Ecumenical Association and residents of the current Hilarita housing fought the action of the six protestors.

Neighbors of the project — Robert E. Winkelman, Robert D. Hayes, Herbert E. Wenig, Gordon Miller, Alfred Cassella and Lewis Merlo — claimed the project was illegal on three grounds.

First, they charged the plans for the 112-unit project were approved by the Tiburon City Council last November in violation of the city's general plan.

The general plan calls for from 2.5 to 5.9 units per acre on the Hilarita site, but the approved plan would allow 14 to an acre, they say

The city's attorney, Richard H. Breiner, contended, however, that the general plan was intended only as a guideline.

Hal Roach Jr. Dead At 52

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) —Hal Roach Jr., former movie producer who went bankrupt trying to keep afloat the studio founded by his famous father, died Wednesday of pneumonia.

Roach, 52, entered St. John's Hospital Monday.

He was the son of Hal Roach Sr., who founded the Hal Roach Studio in the early days of moviemaking after starting out in the business as an extra in silent cowboy films. The elder Roach, now 80, turned out the Laurel and Hardy, Harold Lloyd and "Our Gang" comedy series.

Moscone's Plan For Gas Money

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, today said he will introduce legislation that would help San Francisco recover freeway construction money that it now loses.

"Years ago San Franciscans opted against more freeways," Moscone said. "But I don't think San Franciscans ought to be punished by letting their gasoline tax dollars go elsewhere."

He said the proposal would call for a portion of state gasoline taxes paid in San Francisco to be set aside for projects in the city. He said he would introduce the legislation next week when the legislature reconvenes following its Easter recess.

Freezes Hiring To Freeze Rate

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Postmaster General E.T. Klassen placed a 90-day freeze on hiring by the U.S. Postal Service Wednesday to avoid the need for a previously suggested postage rate increase in 1973.

In what was called a major policy statement, Klassen said action was needed on four fronts to improve mail service and reduce postal costs.

Klassen told postal managers throughout the nation they must place renewed emphasis on service and courtesy; substantially reduce costs without hurting service; allow regional postmasters to transfer consenting employes among post offices without adding employes; and eliminate use of temporary employes.

Broker License Fees Reduced

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —State Real Estate Commissioner Robert W. Karpe announced Wednesday license fees for real estate brokers and salesmen will be reduced $10, effective Saturday.

He said the four-year renewal fee would be cut from $85 to $75 for brokers and from $60 to $50 for salesmen.

The lower fees were authorized in a bill approved by the legislature last year, Karpe said, adding that the reductions would mean an annual savings of about $500,000 for real estate licensees.

Thieves Loot Office Of Safes

FRESNO (UPI) —Thieves broke into the Western Union office here and removed two safes containing money orders, travelers checks and currency totaling $1,700 early Tuesday.

Police say the burglars attempted to chop a hole in the roof and then apparently gave up after hitting a crossbar.

They then managed to pry open an inside locked trap door on the roof to gain entry.

THE PLANE THAT LAUNCHED A THOUSAND LOUNGES.

The first living room size coach lounge flew from Los Angeles to Washington in February, 1971. On that flight American Airlines introduced it to their coach passengers aboard a 747 LuxuryLiner. And the passengers loved it. The rest is history. Soon the air was filled not only with coach lounges, but with television commercials about them. And today while many airlines are building coach lounges, American's 747 is the only one with a Piano Bar in its lounge. And if you're flying First Class, we have the only 747 that lets you reserve a round table for four. At no extra cost. But that first lounge, on that first flight, was really the turning point. And although American's 747 LuxuryLiner may never hang in the Smithsonian, it certainly changed the flying habits of air travelers forever. Ask your Travel Agent for the LuxuryLiner.

Supervisorial Hopefuls See Environmental Happiness

Labor and conservationists can live together happily in Marin, the nine candidates for county supervisor last night assured the Marin Labor Council.

All agreed that the interests of the worker and the conservationist are compatible, and that preserving the county's natural amenities does not have to mean a stagnant job market.

The candidates also generally criticized the cost of county government as excessive, and pledged to cut costs and taxes if elected.

The candidates' night in Painters Hall in San Rafael was sponsored by the council's political arm, the Committee On Political Education. Endorsements, if recommended by its executive board, will be considered at the council's April 5 meeting.

The candidates in the Second District are incumbent Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., a stockbroker; Barbara Boxer, Greenbrae housewife, and William J. Filante, a physician, also of Greenbrae.

In the Third District, incumbent Michael Wornum of Mill Valley, a planner and architect, is challenged by Rev. Samuel J. Banks Jr., pastor of the Village Baptist Church in Marin City.

The Fourth District, where incumbent Louis H. Baar is not seeking a second term, has four candidates — attorney Gary T. Giacomini of Woodacre; Michael R. Peevey of San Rafael, an economist; James Dougan of San Rafael, an insurance agent, and Patricia T. Maginnis of San Rafael, a medical technologist.

All nine were asked if they would support a county ordinance barring professional strike-breakers from taking the jobs of striking employees. All but Wornum and Giacomini said they would support such a prohibition.

Wornum declined to take a position on the proposal, and Giacomini opposed it, saying its legality was doubtful and that it would not affect the county's 11 cities.

The five candidates in the second and third district were asked if they would advertise in the Independent-Journal despite labor's dispute with it. Arrigoni, Boxer, Filante and Wornum answered they would advertise in the I-J. Only Banks declared he will not. The question was not put to Fourth District candidates.

About 20 persons attended the candidates night.

Other statements by the candidates follow:

ARRIGONI — Said he considered himself "working class," asserting he "led the board of supervisors' decision to form a fact-finding committee into the Independent-Journal strike. Unfortunately it never became a reality. I would like to see that issue resolved." He said he believed "a very harmonious relationship" was possible between labor and environmentalists.

BOXER — Noted her attorney husband, Stewart, was "with a labor law firm." She charged the supervisors with "ignoring old people," saying 1,000 of them were on a waiting list for leased housing, and called for refurbishing substandard housing to give jobs and fill the housing need. Mrs. Boxer criticized the supervisors for delegating too much authority to the county administrator's office, promising she would be a full-time supervisor and meet regularly with constituents in the district. She said the Golden Gate Bridge District's local bus service was too costly and "is a failure," claiming its buses are too big to provide needed service into hill areas.

FILANTE — Argued the Golden Gate Bridge District's local bus service is too costly to the county because the district is a monopoly. He called for cutting property taxes, meeting environomental problems by eliminating "economic disparities," cutting government costs, and assuring that all property is assessed at its fair market value. He opposed "county government by the administrator," and said public employees have the right to strike.

WORNUM — Said he was proud of his four-year record in office, and said he had supported an unsuccessful move by the supervisors to settle the I-J strike. He defended the bridge district's subsidy of bus and ferry transit, arguing this was the only alternative to more bridges and freeways.

BANKS — Declared that "the future of labor in Marin is clouded by moratoriums, particularly in Southern Marin," apparently meaning the construction moratorium in Sausalito and the partial ban on new construction elsewhere in much of Southern Marin because of sewage pollution. He deplored that "most laboring people in Marin have to live outside the county" because of high housing costs in the county. He blamed both the supervisors and the state Legislature for the "taxpayer's dilemma."

GIACOMINI — Said he was running primarily "to protect the most unique area in the world." He termed the environment "one ship we have all got to ride together — we drink the same water, breathe the same air and live on the same land. This place is too precious to sacrifice. He said he would encourage any new industry to locate here, but only if it were "clean."

DOUGAN — Said "too many people enter politics for power, and forget the will of the people." He urged "unity between labor and developers to achieve steady jobs. There is plenty of room left in Marin for proper development." He appealed to citizens to look around now for green areas to preserve for public use, and not wait to complain only after developers come before local government with plans to use their land. He criticized County Administrator John Barrows for excessive expansion of his staff.

PEEVEY — Said he was "a very strong conservationist," but added that "too often those who speak out the most for conservation tend to neglect the interests of working people." He promised "much better labor representation" on county commissions, night board meetings for supervisors throughout the county and creation of a county department of consumer affairs.

MAGINNIS — Said she was running for public office to provide "representation for women," especially to focus on issues such as the need for child care and youth centers. She said the $264 fee to file was "pretty steep," and should be waived by the county "so more women and minorities could participate." She favored putting the Golden Gate Bridge under state control and providing jitney bus service between East and West Marin. She supported the state probation subsidy program, adding the board of supervisors was "dragging its feet" on participating in the program.

Aid To Taxpayers In Claim Filing

Representatives of the Sonoma County Assessor's Office will be in Petaluma and Rohnert Park next week to aid taxpayers in filing homeowner and veteran exemption claims.

Members of the staff will be at Petaluma City Hall Monday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and at Rohnert Park City Hall the same hours on Wednesday. The filing period closes April 17 and can also be done by mail.

Train, Bus Collide - Report 15 Are Killed

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI)—A freight train collided with a bus two miles from Pasir Mas in Kelantan state 210 miles northeast of here today, killing at least 15 of the bus passengers, according to official reports received here.

Five Works Of Art Are Stolen

PARIS (UPI) — Thieves walked out of a downtown Paris art gallery with five impressionist and post-impressionist paintings worth more than $1 million Wednesday, police said today.

The works included "A Woman Drying Herself" by Pierre Bonnard, "Portrait of a Woman" by Auguste Renoir, "A Street in Paris" by Maurice Utrillo, "Still Life" by Andre Derain, "The Bay of Trouville," by Eugene Boudin and a wooden mobile by American contemporary sculptor Alexander Calder, police said.

Jacques Verriere, owner of the gallery on Matignon Ave., only a few steps from the Champs Elysees, said the works were insured for $600,000. Art experts put their market value at more than $1 million.

Wide-Angle Thinking Does It

By MARILYN HOFFMAN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK — Audrey Topping has spent most of her life viewing experiences with a wide-angle lens that sweeps the world. She finds her role as photojournalist on an international scale not at all incompatible with being the wife of a newspaper executive, the mother of five daughters, an artist and homemaker.

With the help of a full-time housekeeper, she runs the Topping menage in suburban Scarsdale and rents a studio in which to do her sculpting. She has shown her art work in London and Berlin as well as in New York and nearby Connecticut.

MRS. TOPPING was among the first North American photographers to cover mainland China after the Communist revolution. Numerous examples of her work have been selected for exhibition in "Four Cameras in China," showing at New York's Hallmark Gallery through May 13.

The timely exhibit of 400 photographs, coordinated and edited by Margaret Weiss, covers more than 70 years of Chinese development — from the imperial China of the early 20th century to today's People's Republic.

Mrs. Topping's 67 color slides and dozens of stunning black-and-white photographs were taken during a 2-½-month China visit last summer. She covered more than 7,000 miles and visited seven major cities on assignment for the New York Times (of which her husband, Seymour Topping, is assistant managing editor) and for National Geographic magazine.

Her camera coverage of the new China catches people participating in gymnastics, performing in operas and ballets, and working in factories, workshops, communes, stores and at construction sites. Always she looks for that "warm, human slice of life," a depiction that spells the special quality of her work.

Mrs. Topping's standard equipment for such a junket is "one Leica, two Nikons, and a prodigious amount of color and black and white film."

SHE FOUND almost no resistance to picture taking — either in 1971 or on a previous China venture as a Canadian-born housewife in 1966 — and met only with "smiling, curious, friendly faces." When she was stopped, it usually was for taking pictures of an unfinished project — such as the Peking subway.

For Mrs. Topping, the 1971 trip was a return to familiar sights. She accompanied her father, Ambassador Chester Ronning, a retired Canadian diplomat, whose visit was at the invitation of his friend, Premier Chou En-lai.

Mrs. Topping's grandparents had gone to China as pioneer Lutheran missionaries in 1890, and her father was born there and spent more than 30 years as a student, teacher and diplomat. She was a student at the University of Nanking in 1947-48 and learned to speak Chinese passably well. She was still living in China with her parents at the time of the evacuation in December 1948.

On her recent return to Nanking, Mrs. Topping was delighted to find that her guide was a former university classmate. The two women recognized each other immediately.

Her travels also took her to her father's birthplace of Franchang in Hupeh Province, 600 miles up the Han River from Hankow in the interior of China. No foreigners had been there since the Communist revolution.

AS THE daughter of a Canadian diplomat, Mrs. Topping also has lived in Norway, Iceland and India. As the wife of Seymour Topping, a foreign correspondent for 20 years, she lived in Saigon, Hong Kong, London, Berlin and Moscow.

Over the years, Mrs. Topping has written and photographed numerous foreign sights and situations for many leading magazines, including Life, Newsweek, Vogue and National Geographic. Harper & Row will publish her photo book on China this spring, and Grossett & Dunlap will publish her two children's books on China next August.

If action seems to be the name of her game, she shrugs it off as an old family trait. "We are all artistic people who like to do things," she said.

During intensely productive periods with staring deadlines, Mrs. Topping works 15-hour days. She also initiates creative projects for her children so she can keep an eye on them while carrying out some pet project of her own.

Mrs. Topping would probably be the first to admit that wide-angle thinking gets things done.

Start The Day With Breakfast

Starting the day with breakfast is a habit that can be easily acquired, according to nutrition consultants for the Dairy Council of California.

Begin by having a balanced liquid breakfast, gradually adding other foods as the habit grows. A breakfast should supply at least 25 per cent of the day's food requirements if nutritional health is to be maintained.

It's Back To Times Gone By

It's back to times gone by for inspiration by the lamp designers. One group shown in the Los Angeles Home Furnishings Mart includes old English sea lanterns in original form, chained for hanging or in oatmeal Irish linen shades.

A group of candlesticks in tortoise shell bronze are adapted for lamp bases with linen or antique satin shades. Others are reproductions of early railroaders' metal lunch pails which form 14-inch lamp bases. The shade is linen over transparent vinyl.

Tapestry Will Be Dedicated, Hung

A tapestry designed and woven in memory of the late Bea Eskenazi of San Rafael will be dedicated and hung April 8 at 6:30 p.m. in the social hall of the Marin Jewish Community Center in San Rafael.

The public program is being presented by the Bea Eskenazi Memorial Committee. Mrs. Eskenazi was the wife of David Eskenazi, assistant executive director of the United Jewish Community Centers of San Francisco, Marin and the Peninsula. He and the Eskenazi children are planning to attend the dedication.

The tapestry was designed by Etel Adnan and woven by Hal Painter.

How To Use The Tablecloth

The white tablecloth no longer is a taken-for-granted part of the decor. Tablecloths today are styled with bright prints and solids.

Use a plain cloth with heavily patterned dinnerware. Simply designed dinnerware will look well on either a plain or patterned cloth. Choose a textured fabric cloth if the dinnerware is heavy looking. Use the finer cloths with more delicate china and glassware.

When buying tablecloths make sure you know the table length and width and then plan for an overhang on sides and ends of 10 to 15 inches.

HELP TO DISABLED CHILDREN

The New Hearing Horizons

By JOAN LISETOR

Thomas Edison, Winston Churchill and Leonardo da Vinci had something in common, according to one expert, all had language learning disabilities.

Beth H. Slingerland of Seattle, a national authority on specific language disabilities, was in San Rafael this week to conduct a workshop, "A Multisensory Approach to Help Specific Language Disabled Children," Monday and Tuesday at Dominican College.

The Santa Rosa-born educator was a classroom teacher at the Punahou (Lower) School in Honolulu and was dissatisfied with the results, when she was offered the opportunity to study with Anna Gillingham, a pioneer in the field of specific learning disabilities. This association led to the development of classroom techniques to reach SLD children.

"I knew there were bright children who were not learning," Mrs. Slingerland explained. "Methods were developed and started on a one-to-one basis, but we couldn't reach enough children that way, so I started developing classroom techniques."

SLD CHILDREN have extreme difficulties learning to read, write and spell because they are unable to learn these subjects when taught by normal classroom methods, according to Mrs. Slingerland.

"HEW (Department of Health, Education and Welfare) says that 15 per cent of the population has specific learning disabilities. It is now known that the difficulties are genetic or biological and not caused by poor parenting," she said. "And for some reason the problem is more predominant among boys."

If the children are identified in Kindergarten or the first grade there is a good chance they can be helped.

"Depending on the degree of disability and the skill of the teacher, some children are able to return to an integrated classroom in the fourth grade," she said.

Mrs. Slingerland retired from teaching in 1965 so she would have time to do the work she wanted, which includes travelling throughout the country conducting workshops for persons interested in her approach to language arts. She set up the pioneer program for Specific Language Disabilities in Renton, Wash., in the late '40s and was its coordinator until her retirement. She also directs SLD summer schools in Oregon, Texas, Washington and California. In her spare time she crusades for help for SLD children and encourages parents to aggressively seek changes within the school system for the children.

AN EXPERT in the field of language learning disability, Beth H. Slingerland has developed methods for teaching children with specific language disabilities to read, write and spell. Her multisensory approach involves the use of alphabet cards designed to fit in a chart holder. The cards are used to teach spelling rules.

"WE ARE NOT talking about any expensive building projects, just a space where a qualified teacher can work with these children," she said.

Her method involves using a hear-see-feel approach to teach the children to develop a thought pattern.

"It is much like learning to drive," she explained. "Bodily responses become automatic. The only conscious thought a driver has is his destination. To make the response automatic we have to create thought patterns."

Symptoms of the problem are inabilities to read, write, and spell, but specifically the child has a problem with syntax, pronounces words with sounds out of sequence and writes letters, upside-down, backward and out of place in words, Mrs. Slingerland explained.

"Learning, to an SLD child, is a conscious effort. Mother Nature did not bless him with the ability to make automatic associations. For him things must be broken down in sequence and the abstractions eliminated," she said.

SPELLING IS an important subject, according to the educator, because you never find a bad reader who is a good speller. The reverse is not true, she said, because you can not be a good speller and a bad reader.

Her five-step multisensory approach for teaching spelling to SLD children is:

The child hears the word when it is pronounced by the teacher and repeats the word to hear and feels the sound that opens his throat.

The child gives the sound.

The child names the letters that make the sound.

The child repeats the word and spells it orally.

The child writes the word, naming each letter as it is formed.

In the past five years colleges and universities have recognized the need to train teachers to handle perceptual difficulties in students, according to Mrs. Slingerland.

"It will be another 10 years before the schools get around to implementing programs," she said.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

'Wedding Game' Too Much For Many Parents To Comprehend

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

We had a "wedding and divorce" day at school to raise money for a spring dance. It was put on during lunch hour.

Kids "got married" for 50 cents, and there was a "ceremony" and even a license for each one. There was a "divorce" stand too, so if you wanted, you could put your marriage license and divorce paper on your bulletin board. It didn't mean anything except just fun, and we raised enough money to pay for our band. The kids who stayed "married" were supposed to go to the dance together.

My parents saw my license and had a fit. They say I can't go out with this guy (my fake "husband") and that means I wouldn't be able to keep my date for the spring dance.

Can either of you please set them straight? — MARRIED IN NAME ONLY

DEAR IN NAME ONLY:

Speaking as a parent, I'd say there are better ways to earn money for the spring dance. When a girl brings home a marriage license, she can expect shock waves: Most elders aren't ready for this kind of fun, and they suspect it might lead to adult "games."

How do you tame the waves? Here's Sue. — HELEN

DEAR MINO:

Tell your folks that if a girl has something to hide, she isn't going to pin the "evidence" on her bulletin board. Tell them also:

A slip of paper doesn't start anything up that hasn't been going strong already. Good luck in convincing your parents about that! — SUE

DEAR RAP:

I am 16 and wonder why people won't let the past be forgotten?

I was quite wild last year. I was headed for the slut house and was also becoming a dope addict. But I finally realized what I was doing and am now straight.

At school, people keep asking for stuff because I used to sell it. They get mad and think I'm holding out for more money when I tell them I don't have any.

My parents search my room once a month. They keep bringing up the bad things, too. Every time I go out the door, they're scared.

Guys call up. I know what they want. The nice guys don't call. So I mostly stay home. Straight girls won't take a chance on me either.

People always say the past is behind you, but mine is staring me right in the face. How long? — CAN'T TAKE MUCH MORE

DEAR CAN'T:

Hang on! It may be tough for the rest of this school year, but by the end of summer vacation, you'll be accepted by classmates for what you have become.

A summer job will help — for you'll meet new people who don't know your past. And your parents could be the best help of all, if they'd knock off the fear and give you the trust you've earned. — HELEN

DEAR CTMM:

There's always someone who will be your friend. If you can make just one person see how much you've changed, he or she will get the word around and help open other doors.

It would be great if you could go away for a while (perhaps visiting relatives or friends in a different town). Getting a new image is easier when "remembrers" aren't around to remind you of the old one.

Maybe other changed teens will write in and offer hints. Okay? Okay. — SUE

The Dewings's Big Bon Voyage

By MOLLY MARIN

Some 50 Marin friends will wish the Andrew S. Dewings (she is concert pianist Janet Graham) bon voyage at an open house they will have Easter Sunday from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at their home in Kent Woodlands.

Assisting the Dewings with receiving guests at the open house will be Mrs. P. K. Gillman of Larkspur, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruce and Mrs. Walter Zwieg of Kent Woodlands, and Mrs. B. McRae Dyson and Charles Fullerton of San Rafael. Mr. Fullerton will be staying in the Dewings's home during their absence.

The Dewings are planning a trip abroad in celebration of their 20th year of marriage, and will be on their way home on the anniversary date of July 1.

They will leave April 22 from New York on the Italian flagship Raffaello, going through the Mediterranean and stopping at Madera, Casa Blanca, Lisbon and Mallorca before debarking at Naples.

After a week at the Caruso Belvedere Hotel in Ravello, the Dewings will travel to Rome to visit her cousin, commentator Winston Burdette. They then will go on for 10 days in Vienna, where among other things they will attend the opera, and then drive through the castle country of the Danube and attend Whitsuntide services in the ancient monastery of Melk.

A high point will be a visit with old friends, the Count and Countess Palffy-Uberacker at Sigarstein Castle, their home. In the Salzkammergut Lake country in the Tyrol they will have a reunion with friends coming from Holland to meet them in the medieval market town of Lofer in the Tyrol Inn Valley.

After several weeks in Switzerland, the Dewings will fly to the Rhineland to visit the Fischer-Dieskau family. They are relatives of the famed Lieder singer, who was a neighbor when Mrs. Dewing lived in Berlin for two years when she was performing in Europe.

DOUGLAS A. A. Fitts and Terry Lynn Fischer were married March 18 in Carson City, Nev. His parents are former San Rafael residents, Mr. and Mrs. John Fitts of Guerneville, and the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Fischer of Sebastopol.

The bridegroom is associated with the Sta-Power division of H M Laboratories, Inc., in San Rafael. The newlyweds are living in Forestville.

MR. AND MRS. Brandon Paul Stewart (Lois Denise Sears) are on a wedding trip to Germany and England following their marriage March 11 at Northbrae Community Church in Berkeley.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Clifford Sears of San Rafael are the bride's parents, and the bridegroom is the son of the Harvard P. Stewarts of Lafayette.

When they return from Europe the couple will live in Sacramento. The bride is enrolled in graduate school at Sacramento State College, where she is studying for a master's degree in political science.

CHRISTINA GRYDER of San Francisco was honored at a bridal shower Saturday hosted by Mrs. Kitty Talmage and her daughter, Sue, at their home in San Francisco. Christina will be married to William Sinclair MacKay of Tiburon on April 22.

The future bridegroom's parents are former Kentfield residents Mr. and Mrs. William H. MacKay, who now live in Walnut Creek. His sisters-in-law, Mmes. Theodore C. MacKay and Robert F. MacKay, were among the 25 guests at the luncheon.

Several foreign-born guests brought recipes from their native lands.

THE ROBERT L. Schultzes of Mill Valley have received news of the birth of their first granddaughter, the only girl to be born into the family in a number of years.

The baby, who has a 2-year-old brother, Robert Wilton Schultz, was born on March 20 to Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Schultz of Leucadia in San Diego County.

She has been named Elizabeth Julia, the latter for her paternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Walfred Knutson of Patterson, formerly of Mill Valley. Maternal grandparents are Dr. and Mrs. Wilton Abbott of Los Altos Hills.

Marin City Training Program In Quandary

The situation of more jobs requiring typing-clerical skills than qualified applicants to fill them continues in connection with the office training program at Marin City, according to the teacher, Muriel Lynch.

"When the girls take the federal exams next month for general clerk-typist, the classes may be almost depleted," she said.

"So effective has the program been that the number of classes — which formerly met at the Manzanita Center from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays — has been increased to every day, Monday through Friday.

"Instruction is offered in typing, basic office machines, filing, some English and spelling and some basic instruction in mathematics," Mrs. Lynch said.

Night classes are continuing in typing and shorthand only on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m., she added.

The classes are offered free under the Marin County Regional Occupational Educational Program provided by the Marin County Superintendent of Schools Office in cooperation with the Novato, Tamalpais and San Rafael high school districts. They are held throughout the year and are open to all persons in Marin. So far, all students have been women.

"The whole idea is to give students a skill, particularly typing, the teacher said, "or to make any skill they have better so that they are employable. Students may enter classes at any time, for they are small, allowing individual instruction.

"Two counselors are available through the County Superintendent of Schools Office," Mrs. Lynch said, "to help students with problems and placement in jobs."

She said that anyone may enroll at any time by attending class and completing a registration form.

Check Quality

When buying a carpet, check the quality by picking up the carpet and feeling the construction for substance. It should not be flimsy in appearance or feel. Look at the spacing between tufts — tufts should be close together, except for shag carpets. Carpets with dense pile will wear longer.

He Loves Those Old Toys

By KENNETH G. GEHRET
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

PHILADELPHIA — Leon J. Perelman is like a child with a new toy. Except his delight is in playthings that are not new, but old — and he has lots of them. In fact, a whole museum full.

He shares his treasure trove of 2,500 toys and dolls with some 25,000 visitors who file past the glass-encased exhibits each year, many of whom seem as fascinated as Perelman himself by these reminders of an earlier period and life style.

The collection is both extensive and varied. It is said to contain a cross section of every type of toy made in the United States from the post-Civil War era into the second decade of this century. It includes mechanical banks and other animated toys, toy vehicles from fire engines and stagecoaches to hansom cabs and locomotives, beautiful marbles of glass and "carpet" bowls for indoor use, walking dolls, and even a French music box with five musical figures that move. (The last is a rare exception to the Americana theme of the exhibit.)

Perelman is likely to take a personal guest first to the section that displays mechanical banks. This is the nucleus of the collection and the owner's favorite. He claims it to be the largest assemblage of these thrift toys in the nation.

Mechanical banks were patented from 1865, and the first one was manufactured two years later. Their popularity continued until 1902. Of 243 known types of such banks, the Perelman museum holds 225. Most of them are made of cast iron, and each performs some mechanical action or stunt.

For example, place a penny in the muzzle of a rifle and press a lever — bang! The penny shoots into a tree stump, and a bear pops out. Or put a penny in the slot in the harlequin bank and watch three figures turn on a rotating platform, while one of them also twirls about independently.

Most mechanical banks are not as complex as these two. More typical are the "frog in den" bank, with the frog reaching out his tongue to grasp the coin and deposit it inside his body; and the "jumbo" elephant bank in which a penny is propelled to a slot in the animal's back by a jerk of his trunk when the tail is pulled.

The most valuable banks in the Perelman collection go through just such simple movements. One is the "Uncle Sam" bank. The figure nods a "thank you" gesture when a penny is placed in his outstretched hand; the hand drops and the coin slips into a carpetbag at Uncle Sam's side.

One of the rarest specimens in this group is the freedman bank. Only six are known to exist. One reason few have been found, Perelman speculates, is that very likely only small numbers were made or sold because of the high original price — $4. Most banks of the period cost between 25 cents and $1.

While perhaps somewhat less valuable than the freedman bank, a turtle bank cost Perelman considerably more. He won't estimated publicly the value of the total collection, but he admits having paid $12,000 last year for the turtle bank alone. Only two were known to exist until this one was found.

A partner in a paper company with 11 plants scattered about the country, Perelman has traveled widely and has pursued his hobby with unflagging zeal. In fact, it was on one such business trip that he first learned about mechanical banks — at a hobby show in Fort Madison, Iowa.

"I was fascinated," he said, "and would go to see dealers and attend antique shows as I traveled around. That was in 1958. Soon, I added still banks in my search, then toys in general."

The determination that this collector can muster for the task is indicated in the story he tells about "the girl in the Victorian chair."

He heard that a specimen of this mechanical bank was owned by a farmer some 40 miles from Philadelphia. The address was incomplete, but he had directions to the general area. So he set out about dinner hour one evening. Snow began falling. Asking directions at one stop after another, he made slow progress to his destination but finally reached the farmer's house by 9 or 10 p.m.

The farmer acknowledged that he had the bank and was willing to part with it for $100. But he didn't know where it was; he would look for it later. Perelman was determined not to go away empty-handed. He would help the man look and give him $125.

They went to the attic, without success. The farmer wanted to put the search off. The collector raised the price to $150. It kept going up until, finally, at midnight Perelman had his bank — and the farmer his $200.

Mechanical banks and other antique toys are now so rare that the museum owner no longer looks for them personally. "All top-notch dealers know me and get in touch when they find something of value," he declared.

To this dedicated hobbyist the toys are important since "they are part of the American heritage." And he opened the museum, at considerable personal expense, because "it was crazy to accumulate and not have other people see the collection."

Perelman's Antique Toy Museum is located in Philadelphia's old city near the waterfront. Restoration and new residential construction have improved the entire area. The museum itself is a historically restored house dating from 1785.

Republican Leadership Shows More Confidence In Agnew

By GODFREY SPERLING, JR.
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Vice President Agnew was never higher than he is today among Republican leadership across the United States.

In the opinion of these leaders (national committeemen and committeewomen and state chairmen from every geographical region), Agnew will be President Nixon's running mate next year.

Of the 92 leaders who responded to the Monitor survey, all but five expressed their confidence in Agnew by asserting he definitely would be in the No. 2 slot next fall.

A previous Monitor survey taken immediately following the 1970 election showed about half of these same leaders expressing unhappiness with the role Agnew had played in that campaign.

Thus, at a time when Agnew was himself feeding the speculation that he might not be on the ticket next time, considerable feeling among his own party chieftains pointed in the same direction.

Now Agnew in interviews is talking more and more like a man who will run again in '72. And within the GOP leadership, confidence now is welling up inside him. Very likely it is helping to firm up his decision to stay where he is for another four years — if he can.

The final decision to keep or discard Agnew is that of the President. As Republican leaders warm to Agnew, it becomes increasingly difficult for President Nixon to choose another running mate, should he so desire.

From Nixon's own recent words about Agnew, one can only conclude that he retains a high opinion of the Vice President and will very likely keep him on the ticket.

Comments from a number of leaders on Agnew were along the line that "the vice-president reflects our point of view," or "Agnew adds strength to the ticket in my state."

A clue to Agnew's growing support was found in another part of the new Monitor survey in which the leaders were asked whether they favored the ideological thrust of the President's programs.

Twenty-five of the 64 responding to this part said they were "too liberal." Three thought they were "too conservative"; the remainder said they were "just right."

In 1970 the anti-Agnew attitudes within the party stemmed from those who felt he had been less than potent as a political tactician and activist in that campaign. This feeling obviously has faded with the months.

Flooding Flap Not On Agenda

The county administrator's office said yesterday the controversy over flood control in the San Rafael Meadows area will not be considered Tuesday by the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

John F. Barrows, the county's chief administrative officer, said Supervisor John F. McInnis had requested the matter be delayed so he can meet with disgruntled residents.

Some 156 residents have signed a petition asking the supervisors to dissolve the area's flood control zone, which has estimated that $875,000 will be needed to correct flooding problems.

The petitioners requested that the matter be considered Tuesday, but Barrows said it has been continued to later in April at the request of McInnis.

Police Probe Clothing Theft

Novato police are investigating the theft of men's clothing, valued at $2,300, from Dud's Clothing Store, 926 Grant Avenue.

Officers said someone broke into the shop between 7:45 p.m. Monday and 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, emptied several racks and cleared a display table of shirts and pants.

Entry apparently was made by kicking in a rear door. The shop is owned by Harry Robbins of 410 Alameda Del Prado, Novato.

Guilty Plea To Felony Charge

James La Motte Matthews, 39, of Novato, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a felony assault chargestemming from an incident with a former girl friend in January.

At the time of the guilty plea, a count of rape against Matthews was dismissed by Judge Samuel W. Gardiner, who set sentencing for May 9.

Matthews was arrested Jan. 18 after the woman told police he had attacked her and stabbed her in the stomach the day before.

KENNEDY CENTER

Ingrid Bergman Is Packing House

By JOHN BEAUFORT
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — Turning from the South African tragedy of "Lost in the Stars" to the North African comedy of "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," the Kennedy Center Opera House management faced the problem of preventing Shavian trivia from getting lost in the vastness of the 2,200-seat auditorium.

The proscenium has been masked to reduce it to the modest dimensions of Michael Annals's utilitarian, dun-colored unit setting for Moroccan locales. Director Stephen Porter has encouraged Ingrid Bergman and her colleagues to face front, speak loud, and let the nuances fall where they may. Audibility is reinforced by an amplification with its own metallically nasal overtones. (The opera house has been hailed, incidentally, for its superb acoustics.)

The justification for booking one of Bernard Shaw's lesser talkathons into the Kennedy Center Opera House must have been commercial rather than artistic. The reasonable expectation is that Miss Bergman can sell out the house for its three-week stand. Indeed, "Brassbound" opened with a reported $280,000 advance sale. Considering tha Kennedy Center's financial plight, the rationale is at least pragmatically plausible. But the choice of this theater puts considerable extra strain on an artificial trifle and the actors charged with giving it a semblance of life.

What emerges on the opera house stage is a rather broad but pleasing performance whose interludes of Shavian bravura and jollity resemble oasis in an otherwise somewhat arid polemical terrain.

Miss Bergman's Lady Cicely Waynflete winningly fulfills the expectations prompted by advance reports of her London success in the part. Costumed by Beatrice Dawson in a series of charmingly Gibsonesque Edwardian gowns, the star endows the role and the occasion with radiance, wit, and glamour. Her Lady Cicely is an irresistible busybody whose confident feminine superiority mounts with each triumph over the bungling ineptitude of the "stronger sex."

Shaw stacked the deck so shamelessly in Lady Cicely's favor that there is really no contest. But Miss Bergman's good-humored serenity should disarm the most disgruntled male, even as the aristocratic heroine — in her own ineffable way —conquers brigands, an Arab chief, a cadi, and at last even the redoubtable Brassbound himself.

When the captain tears up the symbolic mementos of a lifelong desire for vengeance against the uncle who has stolen his inheritance, her victory is complete. But it is a victory without reparations or spoils. Incidentally, that the unscrupulous jurist-uncle also happens to be Lady Cicely's brother-in-law merely serves as one of the coincidences which Shaw said life is full of.

Pernell Roberts portrays a Brassbound whose contempt for the establishment (to use a current term) finds expression in a bearded virility (to borrow a word from the quaint long ago). Mr. Roberts possesses the kind of romantic bearing and presence which recalls the days of leading men in the American theater.

A supporting cast headed by such well-assured principals as Leo Leyden, Geoff Garland, Eric Berry, Manu Tupou, and Jay Garner sturdily support Miss Bergman and help enliven an agreeable evening. It is too bad that the extra projection required by the Kennedy Center Opera House mars what would otherwise, I imagine, be a well-tempered, well-balanced production of Shaw's North African adventure comedy.

As for its North American future, "Captain Brassbound's Conversion" ends an all too-short tour with an engagement at Toronto's Royal Alexandra Theater starting April 3.

$1 Million Suit Names Ex-Employer

An unusual psychological sales meeting technique has led to a $1.25 milllion suit against a San Rafael firm by a man who claimed he was publicly beaten and humiliated.

The suit was filed Tuesday in Marin Superior Court against Sta Power Industries, one of Tiburon millionaire William Penn Patrick's firms, by one of its former independent salesmen, Eugene F. Talesfore of San Francisco.

Talesfore, 45, claimed in the suit he had suffered the injuries and indignities during a sales meeting held by the company last July 25 at the Holiday Inn in San Rafael.

First of all, he said in the suit, officers of the company including the president, h. K. White, "intentionally, unlawfully, wrongfully, wantonly, maliciously and recklessly perpetrated a vicious and violent attack" upon him.

They hit him with their fists, he claimed, knocked him about and caused bruises, scrapes, injured arm muscles and a head injury.

Furthermore, Talesfore said, "in the prescence of a large assemblage," they accused him of "wife beating, being a liar and an otherwise despicable person."

Then they threatened to force him to crawl on his belly, he said, while they hurled insults, including ones about his ethnic background.

Finally, the officers and employees "detained him about one hour despite his repeated requests for medical attention," Talesfore claimed in the suit.

All of this apparently was done as a technique to fire up salesmen for the company, which sells oil and gasoline products in 18 Western and Midwestern states.

An official for the company today denied that such psychological sessions were held and denied all charges in the suit.

According to his wife, Talesfore left Sta-Power last month.

Named as defendants in the suit were White and Tom Benzing, Joe Backaus, Joe Hughes and 20 John Does.

Sta-Power is also the object of a suit by the state attorney general's office, which claims it uses illegal chain lettar procedures.

A similar suit against Patrick's Leadership Dynamics Institute of San Rafael is scheduled to go to trial May 15 in Santa Clara County Superior Court in Palo Alto.

Richard E. Schafer of Columbus, Ohio, filed a $2 million damage suit a year ago claiming he was beaten severely and emotionally abused during a leadership and dynamics institute class in Palo Alto.

Hearing On Thursday In Shoot-Out

A preliminary hearing has been set for next Thursday in Marin Municipal Court for one of two youths involved in a shoot-out near Tamalpais High School last Friday.

David Spaulding, 18, of Sausalito, has pleaded innocent to a felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon and misdemeanor counts of carrying a concealed weapon without a permit and carrying a loaded gun.

The other youth involved in the midmorning gunplay, a 17-year-old, has been picked up by sheriff's deputies in Marin City and turned over to juvenile authorities.

The gunplay, in which no one was hurt, took place across the eastbound lanes of Miller Avenue in front of the high school, where spaulding is a student.

Police said the incident apparently stemmed from damage done to Spaulding's car.

Charge Against Lawyer Dropped

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Contempt charges which have been filed during the Soledad Brothers trial against attorney Elaine Wender of Berkeley were dropped Wednesday.

James Grubs, assistant district attorney, dropped the charges which had been filed against Miss Wender Jan. 25 when she argued after being told she could not take a briefcase into the heavily guarded trial.

Judge S. Lee Vavuris previously had dropped contempt citations which had been filed against two defense attorneys during the trial.

John Clutchette and Fleeta Drumgo, the Soledad Brothers, were acquitted of charges they had killed a guard at Soledad State Prison.

Bike Ride Set For Dimes March

To raise "several thousand dollars", the North Bay chapter of the March of Dimes will hold its annual 42-mile bike ride May 6.

Organizers hope more than 1,000 bicyclists will turn out. Each cyclist is expected to bring a list of sponsors who will donate money for each mile covered.

Riders will begin at Mount Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley, cross the Golden Gate Bridge, pedal through the Presidio of San Francisco and Golden Gate Park. They will meet another contingent at the food of Sunset Boulevard in San Francisco and wind up at Lake Merced. Following a rest period, they will retrace their steps.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Alcohol Remains The Nation's Main Drug Addiction Problem

Despite the great publicity given the abuse of narcotics, amphetamines, LSD, and marijuana, alcohol remains our major drug addiction problem. Liquor is more dangerous than all other drugs put together. One in 10 male alcoholics commits suicide and 60 per cent of fatal traffic accidents involve drivers who have been drinking. Furthermore, 38 per cent of all police arrests involve drunkenness.

Some estimate that five per cent of the population of the United States is addicted to alcohol. But unlike addiction to other drugs, not all heavy drinkers become addicted. Only one in five heavy drinkers becomes physically addicted to booze.

FIVE PER CENT of the family's expenditure is for bottled spirits. In all probability, this is more than is spent on medical care.

Persons addicted to drugs, such as heroin, have a physical dependence on dope and become extremely ill when the drug is withheld. Alcoholics also develop withdrawal symptoms when booze is cut off. The victims become agitated and delirium, hallucinations and convulsions ensue. The pink elephants that we read so much about may be missing, but horrifying hallucinations are not uncommon.

THE CITY OF New York spends 40 times as much on its narcotics addiction program than it does on alcoholism. When surveys are conducted on drug abuse, alcohol is frequent ly included, but the impression is given that the drug abusers are limited to marijuana, heroin, LSD, stimulants, or sedatives. This was true of a recent survey among college students.

If alcoholism were a communicable disease, such as diptheria or smallpox, a national emergency would be declared. Many people call it a disease, but in my opinion, it is an acquired condition caused mainly by a behavior problem or a personality weakness.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

SPUDS AND CALORIES

P. O. G. writes: I insist that potatoes are not fattening, but my friends disagree. Didn't you once write in the column that they are not fattening?

REPLY

Potatoes are not fattening unless fried or drenched in butter, gravy, or sour cream. A medium-sized boiled or baked potato has approximately 100 calories. A medium-size banana has 88; one doughnut, 136; one boiled egg, 77; ½ cup vanilla ice cream, 200, and a slice of apple pie, 331 calories.

HARSH BREATHING

N. R. writes: What is stridor in an infant?

REPLY

A narrowing of the air passageway through the voice box (larynx) due to inflammation, spasm or a developmental defect. The youngster has difficulty bringing air into the lungs, which leads to raspy breathing that is audible all over the house.

HABITUATION

G. A. T. writes: Are tranquilizers considered habit forming?

REPLY

Not the most popular types, but there are dozens of different tranquilizers and each should be evaluated separately.

They're Helping Out Each Other

By KENNETH G. GEHRET

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

MINNEAPOLIS — The 10 youths, black and white, sit in a circle in the schoolroom. Their discussion is spirited.

"How come you do so poor in math?" one member of the group demands of a slight white boy. "Took you four weeks to do — how many? — 10 problems. You're dumb, man, dumb!"

The object of this outburst appears to take it all calmly. This isn't his first chiding in "group." He is probably as good at dishing it out as he is accepting his peers' criticism.

The youth doing the challenging then turns to another in the circle and says: "Howie's the one with the worst problem today. He was late again this morning. What we gonna do about him?"

"You goin' on probation if you don't come 'round, man," one warns the offender. "We come to your house, tryin' to get you here on time. Day after day we try to help. You jus' don't care!"

Excitement runs high. The youths simultaneously draw their chairs into a tighter circle, pinning Howie to a file cabinet. One boy raises an arm to strike him. The group leader, an adult responsible for the session, orders him to stop. The interaction becomes less physically threatening but continues boisterous.

The scene is repeated for 1½ hours each afternoon in five classrooms of the Youth Educational Support (YES) Center. YES is more than a casual acronym for the program. YES stands for the you-can-make-it emphasis of the program, aimed at helping to develop a positive attitude toward learning and acceptable social behavior.

Without neglecting academics, work at the center focuses on "social dynamics" and Positive Peer Culture. This means "turning kids around" by substituting their effort on each other for punitive adult authority, according to Thomas A. Kitto, project administrator.

The afternoon sessions are the major ingredient in this effort. Kitto said of them, known officially as Guided Group Interaction and unofficially as "group": "This system places the primary responsibility for social behavior upon the group process. The purpose is to help each other, to talk about what went on (at school) that could have gotten themselves or others in trouble, to get kids challenging each other. In this way, self-concept comes up."

The theory is plausible, though a visitor questions how it really comes out in practice. A wearing down of self-concept appears possible from the scene described.

Kitto acknowledges that individual sessions can be less than ideal. Members of the group must develop a working relationship, which takes time, and a great deal depends on the ability of the adult leader. Kitto criticizes the failure of the leader to make the boys move their chairs back again when they closed in on Howie.

He explained that the black youth who dominated this session has a problem of self-control. Other members of the group are aware of it and are understanding about it, trying to help him. This student gets his turn in "the hot seat" too, since the group decides who "needs help the most," and no one is the target two days in a row.

Kitto maintains that it all works out in time. Most students are helped by the group interaction. Those who don't respond are placed on probation, expelled, or turned over for court action, depending upon the nature of the offense. The project director says he does not hesitate to take whatever measures are required when a student fails to measure up to social standards in due time.

Most of the 50 or so students at the YES Center have come from Bryant Junior High School. They were referred to the center by teachers there for behavioral problems. Blacks and whites are about equal in number. Girls are in the minority.

Academic subjects are studied each morning. An elective hour after lunch precedes "group." The staff consists of 20 adults, paid or volunteer, including teachers, aides, tutors, and group leaders.

The morning curriculum is not organized in the usual way. Academic ("behavioral") objectives are drawn up for each student. These are set at the individual's own achievement level and they are written in terms that can be measured.

"The usual approach is, let's weed out the failures, instead of helping people to succeed," commented Kitto. "Here there is no failure. We say, 'If you try, you will be successful.' So if he tries, either he succeeds or you rewrite his objectives. He has a right to succeed; a school has no right to cause him to fail."

Kitto linked academic success to changes in behavior. He viewed expressions of negative social attitudes in school as resulting largely from a sense of failure there.

But more is required for YES to reach its goals. Kitto and his colleagues must "peel the followers off from their leaders" through such nonmaterial rewards as achievement and improved self-image. Then the leaders will "cross over to the positive side" to regain their following, the administrator believes.

YES operates on a budget of $163,000 ($3,600 per pupil), including building costs. Funds come from state and federal sources, the school district, and Honeywell Corp. The firm helped YES get started four years ago and contributed $40,000 a year until January.

Circuit-Riding Teacher Wins Day—More Jingles

The San Anselmo School District's middle-aged circuit-riding music teacher yesterday won his battle in Marin Superior Court to keep his job.

The district had attempted to fire Dale I.. Parker, 53, on grounds he was incompetent and had "evident unfitness for service."

Alter a five-day trial, Judge Joseph G. Wilson ruled that the district had failed to prove unfitness and that in connection with the incompetency charge, had not complied with legal notification requirements.

The judge had been asked by Parker's attorney, A. Leonard Bjorklund, for a ruling as soon as the school district, represented by Deputy County Counsel Richard V. Godino, had presented its case.

Various school officials had testified during the trial held without a jury.

The case will now be referred back to the school board, according to Bjorklund, for a decision as to whether to appeal Judge Wilson's ruling.

Bjorklund had claimed that the school district's music program had been methodically cut back over the years to a point where Parker became the only instructor of instrumental music.

Thus he had to travel from one school to another.

Tax Service To Aid Poor

Senior management majors from Sonoma State College are offering free income tax service to low-income persons.

Student and faculty members will assist persons with incomes under $6,000 at the Kairos Community Development Center, 90 Williams Street, Cotati, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Appointments may be made by calling the management department.

The students formed a tax advisory and counseling service and receive no pay or academic credit for the work. Advising the project are faculty members Wallace Lowry and Jack Rohrman, both certified public accountants.

Britain Organizes Station To Help Whales And Kin

By JOHN ALLAN MAY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LONDON, England — It is by now well known that a man's best friend actually is his dolphin.

Everybody talks about this but, as with the weather, up to now nobody has done anything much about it.

Now the British have decided to do something.

They are setting up what can best be described as "the whalefare state."

To bring speedy help to stranded dolphins, porpoises, and whales, a whale survival unit has been set up at the exclusive English East Coast resort of Frinton-on-Sea.

This has been placed under the control of Reginald Bloom, formerly of the Flamingo Zoo in Yorkshire and the Chester Zoo in Cheshire.

Bloom has with him a team of cetacean experts whose motto is "have flippers, will travel." They are in touch with volunteers from underwater clubs all over the country.

The clubs in turn have contacts with dolphinariums, which have guaranteed to provide rescue equipment.

And the whole cetacean match is under the watchful eyes of the British coast guards.

Coast guards from now on will keep a constant watch for stranded friends, just as they do for passing ships and strangers. They will be helped by ramblers, climbers, retired sea captains, and small boys.

The moment stranded dolphins, porpoises, or whales are sighted the sighter will get in touch with WSU at Frinton. Frinton will contact its contacts. Help will be on its way in an instant.

Sometimes hundreds of whales have been stranded en masse on the shores of these islands, due to faulty navigation. In the future, it is believed, almost all of them can be saved and sent out to sea again with the correct sailing instructions.

As a porpoise's pal at the Oxford Street dolphinarium, London, said: "We do well to remember our cetacean in life."

Land Provided For Demonstrators

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—City officials have signed a statement agreeing to provide land for use by demonstrators attending the GOP National convention in August, a group planning the protests said Tuesday.

The Convention Coalition said three sites were agreed upon for possible use by demonstrators. Each are within a mile of San Diego's Sports Arena, site of the Republican Convention activity.

Joint Pact May Finance New Petaluma River Park

The Petaluma City Council agreed yesterday to consider a joint powers agreement with Sonoma County for the maintenance of a new park on the Petaluma River.

Supervisor Philip L. Joerger said the county has committed $25,000 for development of the park adjacent to the city boat launching ramp and probably will budget another $25,000 for 1972-73, but asked that the city finance maintenance since it will serve mainly city residents.

Plans for the 20-acre park include three Little League fields, a large softball diamond, a soccer field and picnic and barbecue areas.

Asst. City Engineer Harold Woods estimated maintenance would cost $2,000 per year during the early stages of development and as much as $25,000 per year when it is fully developed.

Councilman Richard W. Clecak said the recreation, music and parks commission had recommended the city maintain the park since it would be cheaper than having the city develop its own park which it would still have to maintain.

Councilman Fred V. Mattei questioned whether enough money would be left over to complete city parks such as La Tercera, Miwok and Lucchesi. He said the city might jeopardize neighborhood parks to concentrate on the large athletic center.

Joerger said he believed sports and civic organizations would assist in development and maintenance of the fields. Clecak said, however, the commission would balk at the plan since little leagues in the past have barred the general public from using fields they maintain.

Joerger said a condition on the county funds would be to name the park "Shollenberger Park" in honor of Petaluma recreation and parks director Richard W. Shollenberger, who recently died. Mayor Helen Putnam and other council members hesitated at the stipulation, saying a council committee is working on a new policy to name parks and buildings. They later relented, saying the county should have the right to name the park since the land is in its ownership.

The council directed City Atty. Edward E. Robert to meet with members of the county counsel's office on details of a joint power agreement on the park and to report back at the April 17 council meeting.

Theft Suspect Bound Over

Nancy Lee Gray, 38, of San Rafael, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a charge of receiving stolen property.

She is to be arraigned April 12.

Mrs. Gray is accused of selling stolen nightgowns at a San Rafael shop. The lingerie is believed by police to have been stolen from a warehouse.

HUB CHIEF'S 27 YEARS

He's A Policeman's Policeman

By DAVID DIETZ

Helpful? Friendly? Courteous to the point of exuberance?

To a citizen entering the San Anselmo police station, Chief Raymond R. Buchignani is all of that. And more.

He is the embodiment of the nice-cop-on-the-beat of eras gone by. It's yes sir, no sir to everyone, even persons 20 and 30 years his junior. It's welcome to the police station, have a seat, great to see you and all the trimmings.

But turn to the subject of crime and public attitudes today and — whoops. Buchignani turns firm, even venomous, and his facial features contort so that the right eyebrow darts up menacingly and the mouth curls grimly.

Buchignani, while a model of cheer on most occasions, is a no-nonsense, straight-from-the-hip, policeman's policeman when the talk turns to the nitty gritty of his business, which he's been at for 27 years. He will observe his 20th anniversary with the San Anselmo force Saturday at a special inspection outside the police station.

"The greatest impact," Buchignani said yesterday of his years as a police officer, "has, of course, been the increase in crime and I do have bitterness toward many things that have occurred. And one is the do-gooders, including the media, who have been complaining about deplorable conditions in county jails and state prisons.

"They are losing sight of the important aspect, which is the victim of the crimes that cause these people to go to state institutions in the first place."

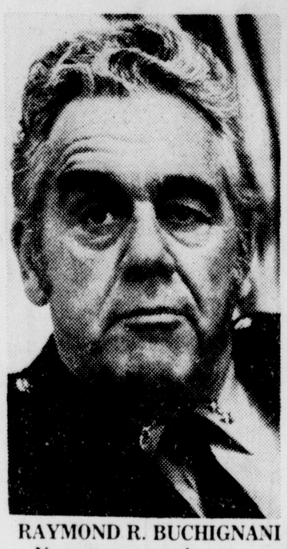
With that, a listener is given an intense discourse by the 51-year-old Buchignani, or Buck, as he is known, on a society he considers imperiled.

"In 1964, when I went to the FBI Academy in Washington, we were told the pendulum was going to swing in favor of the decent people. But things have worsened," he said.

"I don't believe the conditions are deplorable in the prisons I've seen," he said. Many segments of the public, he added, "are forgetting what the victims have gone through financially and physically, certainly."

The thought that marijuana possession may be legalized is repugnant to Buchignani.

He holds firm to the belief that marijuana leads in many cases to harder drugs among youth. And he added, "If alcohol is such an ill, why aggravate the situation by commencing another one?"



RAYMOND R. BUCHIGNANI
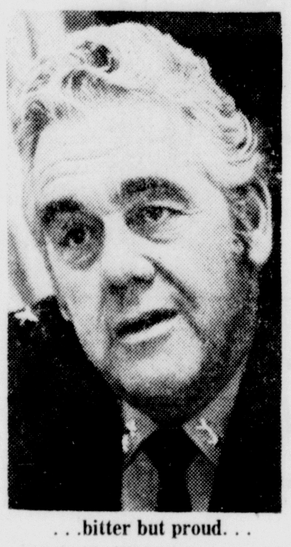
(Independent-Journal photos by Bob Hax)



. . .bitter but proud. . .

Some citizens cry for an assault on pushers, leaving the users alone, but said the chief: "The possessors and cultivators lead us to the big ones."

Buchignani described himself as "upset and disturbed about the leniency of the courts," calling for tougher judges and tougher sentences. And he saw greater citizen apathy than in years past, but noting: "They're apathetic until they're the victims of crimes and then they ask how they can protect themselves and their families in the future."

Despite a recurring necessity to help out his father in his Corte Madera butcher shop when the chief was a young man, law enforcement always was Buchignani's occupational ambition. "I always admired police officers," he said.

The chief, a native San Franciscan who lived for many years in San Anselmo before moving recently to Fairfax, held his first police job, as a patrolman in San Francisco, shortly after discharge from the Army in 1945.

During World War II, while serving with the infantry in the Philippines, he was wounded by an exploding grenade and received the Purple Heart. Buchignani also served at Guadalcanal and New Britain during the war and was discharged as a master sergeant.

He moved from the San Francisco force to Fairfax's, finally joining the San Anselmo Police Department in 1952. Buchignani rose to sergeant, and was appointed chief in 1959, despite some public sentiment for Asst. Chief Sam N. Serio.

"With all the bitterness, I'm very proud," he said.

Buchignani, in addition to training at the FBI Academy, is one of only two chiefs in Marin — David L. McIntosh of Corte Madera is the other — who holds a special certificate from the state Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training for work and training achievement and experience in his field. And he holds a state Board of Education credential to teach police science.

He is a former president of the Bay Counties Police Officers Association. Before Army duty, he graduated from Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley and attended St. Mary's College. Buchignani, twice married, is the father of three grown children borne by his former wife.

Like most law officers, he considers today's policeman better equipped and trained than ever. "That's where society has not forgotten us," he said.

His major problem as San Anselmo chief is ridding the town of house burglars working in the daytime. An average of four such crimes occurs each week, he said.

The chief said he has funds budgeted for the next fiscal year to start a property identification program similar to that conducted in homes in other California cities. Marked possessions, together with a warning attached to the front door of a home, have proved a successful deterrent, the chief said.

Hospitals' 17% Wage Hike Pact

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Workers at 13 Kaiser Foundation hospitals in Northern California, including one in San Rafael, have accepted a contract granting pay increases of 17 per cent over two years, it was disclosed yesterday.

A Kaiser spokesman said there are "too many variables involved" to immediately estimate effects of the proposed wage increase on health plan charges.

The federal Pay Board must approve the increases because they exceed the 5.5 per cent annual guideline.

The first year's raise of 8.1 per cent would increase the wages of about 4,000 workers between $9 and $19 a month. About 150 workers at Kaiser facilities in Marin are affected.

Kaiser said it would pay a 5.5 per cent increase immediately. The remainder would be paid when, and if, approved by the Pay Board.

Explosions Rock Rio Oil Plant

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)— Three explosions rocked the state owned petroleum refinery in Duque de Caixas early today hospitalizing more than 50 firemen and workmen scorched by the flames.

The Guanabara civil defense agency said the number of dead was unknown, but a report of Radio Globo said 20 were killed.

Commuter Group May Buy Buses

A novel solution to their commuting problem has been proposed by a group of Marin residents. They may buy and drive their own buses.

The group, Club Able, was formed a year ago under the wing of the Golden Gate Bridge District which pledged to subsidize its charter bus to the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco. Starting with 30 members and one bus, the club now has 113 members and three buses, one from Petaluma, district directors were told yesterday.

Members pay up to $35 a month for their guaranteed seat aboard the chartered buses, which serve destinations not on the bridge district's commuter bus routes.

District engineer Robert E. Shields, reporting the success of the club to the transportation committee, said the club was "actively exploring" incorporation as a nonprofit group to issue stock to buy its own buses. This purchase, however, will require district aid, Shields said. He did not say how much aid, but the committee agreed to consider the proposal further at a future meeting.

The district can subsidize each bus up to $500 a month, but because of heavy patronage aboard the club buses the subsidy averaged $243 per bus last month.

Shields said the average subsidy per passenger aboard the club buses worked out to 34 cents, compared to the 57-cent subsidy the district pays for each passenger carried on its own bus fleet. Another advantage of the charter system is that fewer district buses are needed, he noted.

He reported that a group of commuters from Marin and Southern Sonoma is about to form a new club to charter a bus to the Navy shipyard at Hunter's Point in San Francisco. Also planned are club buses to the Presidio of San Francisco and to San Francisco State College, he said.

The committee also heard a report by Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring that the new commuter bus system was drawing many of its patrons out of car pools, and a prediction by him that the current fleet of 154 buses will have to grow at least 200 by next July to keep up with growth in patronage.

New Hospital's Architects Hired

The Petaluma Hospital District board yesterday hired Stone, Maracini and Patterson of San Francisco as architects for the district's proposed new hospital.

District administrator Joseph A. Horner said the board adjourned to next Wednesday at noon to discuss details of the contract. The architects planned Hillcrest Hospital and did the original feasibility study for the new hospital.

The board also will hear reports on the feasibility of building on two sites that have been offered free for the hospital location. Both are in East Petaluma.

Horner said he hoped groundbreaking could be held late this year, with construction taking 18 months.

Air Pollution Chief Accused Of Not Using Tough Powers

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — The top administrator of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District was accused yesterday by a district official of failing to use tough powers given him 16 months ago.

The district's board in November, 1970, gave the air pollution control officer, D. J. Callaghan, power to order polluting industries to install monitoring instruments in their smokestacks.

But, according to the secretary of the district's advisory council, Edward Groth III, Callaghan has shown "a very evident reluctance to exercise this authority." Groth, a Stanford University biologist, said "the biggest obstacle to date appears to have been a lack of diligence on the part of the control officer."

Groth made his charges as the advisory council considered an inconclusive report by its technical committee on the effectiveness of the monitoring power. The issue had been referred to the council by the board.

The council debated the technical committee's report for more than an hour, finally endorsing and sending it to the board of directors. But Groth's charges, in a seven-page memorandum mailed in advance to council members, never were discussed.

Groth also charged that Callaghan, "as a result of an error or a conscious decision," misinformed the board last September when he said the power granted him a year earlier would not be his to exercise for another two months.

Groth scored the technical commitee's report as superficial, edited to omit all critical references to Callaghan, and one-sided because it swallowed without question Callaghan's assurances that the new regulation was working well.

Callaghan also misled the board last November in a report that 45 in-stack monitors were being operated by 15 companies, Groth said. The report failed, however, to note that none of the instruments had been ordered by Callaghan, or that all were installed by the industries as part of their check on production, not to control pollution, Groth said.

"I think we were taken in by a snow-job," Groth said of the committee. The committee mistakenly assumed that the staff must have applied the regulation diligently, he said.

"As a result, the committee has maneuvered itself into a position of defending (Callaghan) against critics on the board who have questioned his diligence in the use of in-stack monitoring," said Groth, himself a persistent critic.

"It is essential that we maintain independence of thought and 'tell it like it is,' even if our conclusions may prove embarrassing to the staff, the board, or others," he said.

Groth complained that Callaghan assured the committee that "a rapidly expanding monitoring program was coming up," but had refused to furnish the committee a list of polluters being considered for in-stack monitoring.

Even that belated promise to use the regulation came only after "a protracted campaign of efforts by the board of directors and certain citizen groups to persuade (Callaghan) to exercise his authority," Groth wrote.

The technical committee report endorsed by the full council declared the power granted Callaghan was proving effective and that mandatory monitoring on all stacks "would not be particularly useful and appears not to be feasible."

Council member Edward I. Murphy, a San Francisco architect, objected to including Groth's charges in the committee's report, saying "The committee has spent months on this. This is no way to run a business — we'll have chaos."

Groth retored that the committee had spent no more than three hours discussing the issue.

Route For Alaskan Oil Under Attack

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., says an Interior Department economic report on the proposed Alaska oil pipeline was a sham and a hoax because it did not report that an alternate route through Canada would be "far superior economically".

The economic report on the controversial pipeline, which would carry oil from Alaska's North Slope to the southern port of Valdez, concluded that no other route would be more economically efficient than the Alaska route. The economic study was released last week with a six-volume study of the project.

Aspin and environmental groups have claimed that a trans-Canada route for the pipeline would avoid earthquake zones and the use of oil tankers.

Terra Linda Pool Schedule

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Try this quiz on the March 30 birthday of Vincent van Gogh (1853-1890), Dutch artist:

T F 1. The son of a Protestant pastor, Vincent was a restless youth whose chief ambition was to become the ice-skating champion of Amsterdam.

T F 2. Uncertain of his art ability, Van Gogh tried to succeed at other jobs, including work as a salesman, language teacher, and Belgian missionary.

T F 3. At age 33 he went to Paris to live with his brother Theo, an art dealer, who persuaded him to copy old masterpieces on display in the Louvre.

T F 4. Inspired by the Impressionists, Van Gogh went south to Arles where he painted dozens of scenes in splashing colors of yellow, green, and blue, which his brother couldn't sell.

T F 5. Driven mad by the hot sun of southern France, Van Gogh quarreled with his friend Gauguin and ended his life in an insane asylum.

ANSWERS

1. FALSE — Hans Brinker wanted to win the silver skates, not Van Gogh.

2. TRUE — His failures led him to sympathize with the poor, who he painted.

3. FALSE — In Paris Vincent became acquainted with modern art, which inspired him.

4. TRUE — His work at Provence is acclaimed today as that of a genius.

5. TRUE — His spontaneity in painting grew from Impressionism but led to Expressionism.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Keep A Few Trumps Around If You Foresee Complications

One of the reasons for teaching a beginner to draw trumps as quickly as he can is that this gives him something definite to do. This is on a par with teaching the opening lead by advising beginners to lead the card nearest the thumb. It's better than no rule at all and has the virtue of getting the play started. For experienced players a better rule is: Don't draw trumps immediately if you foresee complications.

Opening lead — ♡ Q

FORCES RUFF

West leads the queen of hearts and continues the suit, forcing you to ruff the second round.

You draw two rounds of trumps with the ace and king, but you stop short when East discards a diamond on the second trump.

What would happen if you drew the rest of West's trumps? That would use up all of your own trumps as well. You would then take the club finesse, losing to the king. Back would come a heart, and the long heart suit would defeat you. This is a complication.

TRUMP IN DUMMY

You must leave a trump in dummy to help in the defense of your trumps. After drawing two rounds of trumps, you lead the queen of clubs for a finesse.

East takes the king of clubs and leads a heart.

You cannot afford to ruff again. Instead, you discard a low diamond. This gives up nothing, since you are bound to lose that low diamond no matter how the hand is played.

OUT OF HEARTS

After this trick, however, dummy is out of hearts. If West leads a fourth heart, dummy's jack will be used to ruff the trick. This spares your own trumps. And you can then get back to your hand with the king of diamonds to draw the rest of West's trumps and take the rest of the tricks with the ace of diamonds and good clubs.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - J 7 6
♥ - K 4 3
♦ - A 6 3
♣ - A J 7 2

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass or bid one club.

U.S. Energy Crisis Cited By Aspinall

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall, D-Colo., says the nation faces an energy crisis and he urges Congress to examine industry and government efforts to meet the demand for gas, oil, coal and electricity.

Aspinall told the House Tuesday that environmental and consumer groups, government and private industry "have agreed almost unanimously on one point: our country is facing an energy crisis."

Creampuff '65 Buick Riviera $1595

Here's the collector's classic the '65 Buick Riviera, the last of the original Riviera body style. We sold this absolutely like-new Riviera new in '65 and have just taken back in trade.

Just over 62,000 miles on this cream colored Riviera that has saddle leather bucket seats with console plus just about every extra made on the Riviera like power steering, power brakes, power windows, factory air conditioning, wire wheels, tinted glass, w/w tires.

Creampuff '63 Buick 34,000 miles $695

This well-taken-care-of Buick LeSabre 4-dr. has only 34,000 miles. That right only 34,000 miles. We sold this new in '63 to local couple who just traded on another new Buick LeSabre.

That means that the original owner used this car just over 4,000 miles per year since new. Add your own mileage per year and you will see just how little this car has been used.

Court Date In Assault On Lawman

A man involved in a wild battle with a Ross policeman March 16 has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on charges of burglary and felony assault on an officer.

Due to be arraigned Monday is James Michael Bennewitz, 24, of San Francisco.

Bennewitz was arrested after Ross patrolman Michael Schladweiller found him at Ross Town Hall at about 2 a.m. The officer said after he had put one handcuff on Bennewitz, the man spun around and slammed the cuffs into the officer's face. A battle ensued in which the officer sprayed mace into Bennewitz's face but the suspect managed to get the officer's gun and flee.

He later was arrested after a chase by police who stopped his car in Corte Madera.

3rd Big To Unmerge ITT, Hartford Fails

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)— Consumer advocate Ralph Nader Wednesday lost a Superior Court bid to overturn the merger of Hartford Fire Insurance Co. and International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

Superior Court Judge Walter J. Sidor dismissed the appeal — the third time Nader had sought to break apart the largest merger in corporate history.

Sidor cited previous rulings that a person bringing court action in such a case would have to prove he has suffered injury or might suffer injury.

"Nader is found to have a general interest in the subject matter," Sidor's decision said, "and not such a specific personal interest which would give him standing to be an aggrieved person."

Nader had appealed a decision by former state Insurance Commissioner William Cotter permitting the merger, claiming the public was not given complete information.

The decision was announced May 23, 1970.

Nader testified in January that he believed Cotter was under pressure to approve the merger.

Nader said Cotter told him in March of 1970 that the insurance commissioner's staff was inadequate to study the implications of the merger.

Cotter, now a U.S. congressman, testified in January that Nader had asked him to delay his decision approving the merger until Nader could provide him with more background information.

Cotter testified that he had already made up his mind to approve the merger but held off until the Nader material arrived.

When he received it on May 14, 1970, Cotter said, he found nothing new and then decided to make the announcement of the approval.

Nader later petitioned in federal district court in Hartford to prevent the consent decree that allowed the merger from taking affect.

The decree however was approved by federal judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld in September, 1971.

Blumenfeld said then that briefs Nader filed to prevent the decree discussed "historical information suppresed from the public" but said he found no "bad faith or malfeasance" on the part of either company.

ITT, in a statement following Wednesday's decision, said the company was "gratified."

New Sewer Connect Plan Is Studied For Stinson

Directors of the Stinson Beach County Water District agreed last night to confine a septic tank survey of the community to areas where the district is uncertain if sewers will be needed in a planned waste treatment and disposal system for Stinson.

Director John L. Jones said the board, after conferring with William Desmond, county chief of environmental health, decided to limit the survey — at least at present — to include all the Panoramic Highway, Highlands and Seadrift areas.

The district is already fairly certain that sewering will be needed in the Calles, Patios and Stinson development areas where septic tanks are failing or infeasible because of terrain, he said.

The board also asked its engineer to prepare a waste treatment and disposal plan for the community showing all areas served, although such an extensive collection system will probably not be necessary, Jones said.

Jnes explained that, in order to apply for state and federal grants, the district must have a project plan completed by May and a plan with total sewering indicated is needed since the district still does not know what areas must be sewered and which can remain with septic tank disposal.

In other business, Jones said the board learned that state and county sanitation agencies, and the Bay Area Regionl Water Quality Control Board have indicated they favor the district's tentative plan to dispose of its sewage through a system of aerating lagoons and a restricted recreational lake in the hillsides.

Assault Suspect Pleads Innocent

Charles E. Powell, 23, of Guerneville, pleaded innocent yesterday in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court to misdemeanor charges of possession of stolen property and assault on a peace officer.

The charges were reduced from felonies by Judge Alexander J. McMahon and a jury trial was set for April 27. Powell was arrested Saturday on a warrant charging him with possession of items stolen in a December burglary at the office of Dr. Daniel P. Krakora. Officers said he struck and kicked them during the arrest.

Age Has Not Mellowed Bridge

CLARKSTON, Wash. (UPI)— Age has not mellowed the balky drawbridge over the Snake River.

The bridge connecting this community with Lewiston, Idaho, first was raised 20 years ago. It got stuck, but maintenance crews were able to lower it.

The bridge wasn't raised again until Tuesday when officials became curious about its lift mechanism. Again it became stuck in the "up" position.

It took workers 2 1-2 hours to get it back down, and engineers said the counterbalance apparently was too heavy.

Deadline For Filing Friday

With the deadline for filing for the Marin City Council scarcely 24 ours away, only two persons —Royce McLemore and Ernest Small — have filed for five council seats which will be filled in an election Tuesday, elections chairman Hazel Curry reported.

Up for election are the seats of Chairman Samuel L. Banks Jr., Joann Jackson, Small, Roosevelt Van Dyke and Peggy Bullock.

Banks, a member of the council since it was formed in 1968, has already announced he will not seek another two-year term since he plans to devote his time to his campaign for county supervisor from the third district.

Mrs. Curry urged interested Marin City residents to obtain nominating petitions from the Manzanita Center and turn them in before the deadline, 5 p.m. tomorrow.

Polling place for the election will be the old Marin City firehouse adjacent to the center and all residents 18 years old and older, whether registered voters or not, are eligible to vote because the council is not an official body.

'Unique' New IRS Center

FRESNO (UPI) —Presidential counselor Robert Finch said Tuesday the new $14 million Internal Revenue Service center here is unique in that it is the first federal facility for which the government considered its impact on the community before construction.

The data processing center was designed in part to alleviate unemployment through its location in an underemployed section of the city.

380 Apartments For Sausalito Are Approved

The Sausalito Planning Commission last night gave conditional approval to an amended plan for the Whiskey Springs apartment development, but cut the total number of units permitted in the project by 10 per cent.

Chairman Robert L. Nissen said the commission reduced the allowed units from approximately 431 to 380 by refusing to grant the developers a 10 per cent increase in density as a bonus for design excellence.

Many residents living adjacent to the planned North Sausalito development appeared in order to protest, according to Nissen. He said most of those who spoke objected particularly to the increased population and resultant traffic the development would generate.

Developer Joseph Duffel had sought permission to amend his original plan for the project to permit relocation of some units, parking and open space areas.

Final approval of the changes must come from the city council.

Greece To Buy American Jets

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Despite opposition in Congress, the administration will sell Greece 36 F4 Phantom fighter-bombers to modernize its air force.

The administration disclosed Wednesday that an agreement to sell to the Greek military junta the two squadrons of planes was signed in Athens Tuesday.

Thirty-four House members sent President Nixon a letter Wednesday asking him to rescind his decision to resume military aid to Greece and to establish a home port there for the U.S. 6th Fleet.

Terra Linda Student Is Finalist

A Terra Linda High School student has been selected as one of six finalists for two $4,000 scholarships offered by Pacific Gas and Electric Co., it was announced today.

He is Daniel John Melcon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zenope Parnak Melcon of 234 Cobblestone Drive, San Rafael.

The utility company offers 16 scholarships each year in memory of its late president James B. Black. The finalists were selected Monday and Tuesday from among 20 semi-finalists interviewed in San Francisco. All must be sons and daughters of company employees.

The two winners will be given their scholarships, payable at $1,000 per year at a dinner May 8 at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco. Company president Sherme L. Sibley will make the presentation.

Atomic-Like Blast Kills 3 In Boston

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (UPI)—A series of explosions that witnesses said resembled "an atomic blast" tore through a fireworks complex Thursday, killing three persons and touching off a fire that leveled eight of the factory's 10 buildings.

Three persons were known dead and a fourth was missing and believed dead, police reported. Eleven others were injured.

The cause of the blasts at the Pyro Products Inc. and Interstate Pyrotechnics Co. complex was unknown, fire officials said. The firms employed 16 to 20 persons, officials said.

Bob White, 35, of Abington, said he went out for coffee for his fellow workers shortly before the blast —in a break with the normal routine during which a 20-year-old office boy makes the coffee pickup in town. The office boy died in the blast which occurred just as White was opening the door to the coffee shop, he told UPI.

"I never got the coffee. I came right back," he said. "It should have been me (who died). My life was over. I'm 35 and I was in the service and he wasn't. If the little 20-year-old kid went for coffee, I would have died and he wouldn't have."

"It was just like Hiroshima," said an unidentified student at Bridgewater State College, a short distance from the woods-ringed blast scene on the outskirts of this community 20 miles south of Boston.

The Rev. Gerald Hindermith, chaplain at the college, said he heard a rumble and felt his house shake. When he looked out a window, he said, he saw "this huge white flame followed by a mushroom cloud. It looked like an atomic blast."

He went to the scene immediately and saw a badly dazed man and woman stagger out of the woods.

Frank Silvia, who lives less than 200 yards from the site and operates a repair shop in a concrete garage, said the blast knocked him off his feet and threw him several feet.

"My wife was inside the garage and I hollared for her to get out of there," he said. "Debris blew right over the place. I ran behind the concrete garage and lay down against the wall. My wife ran away about 300 feet."

Japan Baseball Stars On The Rise

By RALPH CHATOIAN

HONOLULU — What a way to watch a baseball game, with Diamond Head soaring up from behind the left field fence and beautiful palm trees all around. Here I am, instead of eating hot dogs, I'm struggling with chop sticks and saimin, a tasty dish of noodles and pork.

The San Francisco Giants and Lotte Orions of Tokyo drew only an average of 5,880 fans each of the three days in this city, the largest crowd being Saturday night's 7,470. The tourists had more importnat things to do than watch exhibition baseball games — like soaking up the sun and ogling the bikini-clad girls on Waikiki Beach.

After three low-scoring games with the Orions earlier in spring training, the Giants finally unloaded during the trio of games, scoring 24 runs, smashing 30 hits, and crunching out nine home runs. The nearly 300 Northern California Giants Boosters who made this 3,000-mile trip to watch their favorites were really wearing wide smiles the past few days.

The Giant fan club took up a section between home plate and first base and when Dick Dietz slugged a home run over the center field fence in the final game Sunday, he tipped his hat to the group after crossing home plate. Especially going wild was Mrs. Augusta Jacoby of San Francisco who heads the one-woman Dick Dietz Fan Club."All this trade talk about Dietz really upsets me," she said. "He's such a good player." She wears a Dick Dietz button, complete with picture of the Giants' catcher, and blows a whistle everytime he comes to bat.

The Orions had their own fan club at the trio of games. A group of 102 fans had flown from Tokyo to Phoenix to watch some of the games and then came to Honolulu for the Giant games. When their heroes did a good deed, up would go a big Orion banner and the boosters would wave their hats and scream. These Japanese people are really going wild over baseball.

The Orions are one of five major league teams in Tokyo. All teams are sponsored by large business, the Orions by the Lotte Chewing Gum Co., thus the name Lotte Orions. There are 12 major league teams in Japan, divided into two leagues, and each team has only one minor league team in its farm system, where the U.S. teams have three and four minor league affiliates. It is really surprising how far Japanese baseball has come in such a short time.

The Orions' third baseman, Michiyo Arito, is the Brooks Robinson of Japanese baseball, and he showed why by making some fantastic plays against the Giants. His yearly salary, when you change the yens into dollars, comes to about $140,000. The baseball stars of Japan are well-rewarded.

Althgugh it's true most of the Japanese players lack size, Arito is the exception, standing 6-foot-3 and weighing 190 pounds. Because of the overall lack of size, the batters do more line-drive hitting and the pitchers do more curve ball throwing.

SOME HITS AND HOPS — Everybody in the Giants organization who made the Hawaii trip, players and executives and their wives, were wearing white sport shirts with the team name in orange above a left pocket. Said Sam McDowell about the shirts: "I think they look more like barber shirts. But what the heck, on the way down the stairs I stopped and gave two haircuts and made $2.40."

When boosters president Allan B. Murray was checking around the first day to make sure all his tribe were getting the right rooms and their own baggage, one of the gals exclaimed, "Al, when I opened the door to the room you gave me there was a man inside." "My gosh," said Al, "I'll take care of that right now and get you a different room." Said she: "If you do I'll quit the club."

Both Murray and Milt Schwartz, a San Rafael man who decided the day before the trip to come to Honolulu when he learned of a late concellation, have been talking it up after beating Walter Goldman, an expert player, in dominos. But I think that sly Goldman is setting them up for a kill. What did you say that was at a dime a point?

Well, back to the beach. "Surf's up!"

REDS WIN

Bench Blasts 2 Home Runs

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Hoyt Wilhelm is in a position today to appreciate an old baseball joke about Ty Cobb, the Detroit Tiger hall of famer whose .367 lifetime batting average is the highest in the game's history.

It seems that Cobb was asked by a young reporter in 1955 how much he thought he would hit if he were playing in the era.

"I'd say about .330," replied Cobb.

"Is that all?" shot back the reporter, sensing a good story.

"Yes," said Cobb. "But you must remember I'm 69 years old."

"Old Folks" Wilhelm is only 48 but he looks like he can go on pitching effectively in the majors as long as free-swinging modern hitters try to jack his fluttering knuckleballs out of the ball parks. Hoyt is doing his thing for the Los Angeles Dodgers these days and demonstrated Wednesday that he is still capable of closing out a winning game.

Wilhelm, who doesn't feel at home on the mound unless there is an enemy runner on base, yielded a double to Jim Nettles leading off the eighth inning and then retired six batters in a row to complete the Dodgers' 6-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins. Wilhelm, who allowed six runs in one third of an inning in his previous spring outing, thus reduced his earned run average from 162.000 to 27.00. As Wilhelm might say, echoing Cobb, "You must remember I'm 48 years old."

Willie Davis hit a two-run homer for the Dodgers and now has connected for four homers, four triples and two doubles

San Rafael's Farris Gets No-Hitter

The young pitcher yesterday fashioned a 4-0 no-hitter against Galileo yesterday in San Francisco, thus improving the San Rafael log to 3-8. The win pushed the Bulldogs into the Golden Gate Tournament championship chase today against Mission High School of San Francisco.

In another game involving a Marin County Athletic League team, Tamalpais beat Lincoln of San Francisco, 10-8, in the Terra Nova Tournament at Pacifica yesterday.

Farris, 1-1, struck out 11 and walked one. He surrendered the free pass in the fifth inning and allowed only one other man to reach first base, that coming on an error in the first inning.

He helped his own cause with a run-scoring single. Teammate Dirk Gansloser walloped a home run in clinching the victory.

Tam's Clifford Hall belted a solo home run in the third inning to trigger a five-run rally.

Tamalpais opens the Marin County Athletic League season against visiting Drake High School in Mill Valley on Tuesday, 4 p.m.

NAVE LANES

Bowler Campbell Triumphs

Gary Campbell of San Jose averaged 242.8 pins a game to win the Professional Central California Bowlers tournament held over the weekend at Nave Lanes in Novato.

Three local bowlers finished in the top 24 in the event. They were led by Ed Henry who averaged 213 and rolled the tournament's high game, 289. Ernie Evans of Greenbrae averaged 210 and Jerry Stewart of Petaluma averaged 207.

A total of 179 bowlers from 21 cities competed for $6,000 in prize money, of which about $600 went to Campbell. They bowled a 10-game qualifying set Saturday, and the top 24 returned Sunday for the finals.

Rounding out the top five were Joe Alle of Oakland, Craig Walker of Sacramento, Fred Jackson of Walnut Creek, and Dennis Jones of Chico.

Four Marinites Entered In Motorcycle Race

Four Marin County motorcyclists are entered in the dirt-track professional race which will be held Sunday, April 9, as part of the Cycle '72 motorcycle show at the Cow Palace in San Francisco.

Steve Knechtley and Ron Davies of San Rafael, Russ Powell of San Anselmo and Terry Otton of Mill Valley plan to compete for the minimum of $2,100 in prize money, of which about $800 can be expected to go to the winner. The event will feature Don Emde, winner of the Daytona 200-mile road race.

Tickets for the race are $3.50 for general admission and $5 for box, with tickets for children under 12 half price. Tickets for the previous four days of the show, April 5-8, are $2.50 for adults, 75 cents for children. Tickets are available at the Cow Palace box office and at all Macy's outlets, including the one at 4th and Court streets in San Rafael.

A program of instruction and play in badminton will be held at the Drake High School gymnasium from 7:30-9:30 p.m. seven consecutive Tuesday nights beginning next Tuesday.

Instruction will be given by George Ingram, veteran player and former president of the St. Francis Badminton Club of San Francisco.

Enrollment fee is $2.50. The program is sponsored by the San Anselmo Parks and Recreation Department.

Pitcher Reberger Sent Down

McCormick, 9 Others Trimmed By Giants

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — Three San Francisco Giant veteran pitchers, including Novato's Frank Reberger, plus eight other players will not be at Candlestick Park Thursday, April 6 for the season opener against San Diego.

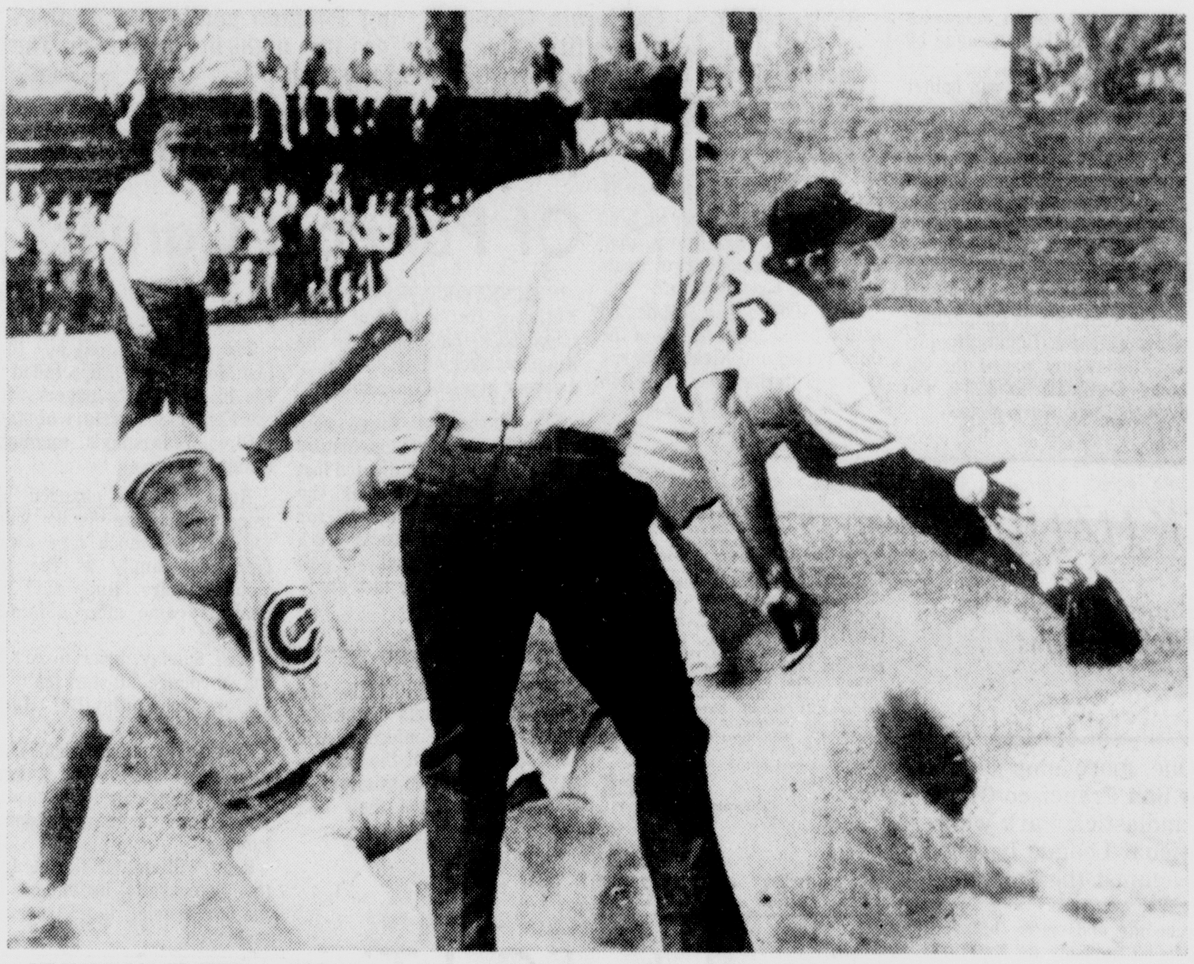
Reberger was sent to Casa Grande for reassignment but two veteran Giant cohorts, Mike McCormick and Rich Robertson, were given their walking papers.

The eight others scheduled for reassingment were: pitchers Jim Willoughby, Toru Hamaura, Shigeyuki Takahashi and Lee Pitlock; infielders Jim Ray Hart and Mike Phillips; and outfielders Garry Maddox and Gary Mathews.

Meanwhile Bobby Bonds and Willie McCovey, both batting below .22 in exhibition play, hit a home run apiece Wednesday, leading the San Francisco Giants to an 8-6 victory that broke a three-game, Chicaco Cub winning streak.

The two solo blasts, both off loser Bill Bonham, backed the five-hit pitching of Sam McDowell, whose eight-inning mound stint was the longest by a giant this spring. McDowell gave up only five singles but walked nine and served up two wild pitches.

Petaluma's Joe Dicker pitched two shutout innings for the Cubs. Ken Henderson, who singled in a run in the first inning, hit a three-run double in the second.



UNUSUAL SLIDE — Chicago Cubs performer Joe Pepitone yesterday hit the dirt in beating the throw to San Francisco pitcher Sam McDowell (36) who was covering first base while Willie McCovey fielded a grounder. Umpire Doug Harvey (facing Pepitone) observed the play in Scottsdale, Ariz. The Giants won, 8-6. (UPI Telephoto)

$40,000 FIRST PRIZE

Trevino, Palmer Favored In Greensboro Open Golf

GREENSBORO, N. C. (UPI) —Lee Trevino, pro golf's 1971 player of the year, thinks the soggy fairways hold the key to victory in the $200,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

"If you miss the green you're messed up because you can't get back on for a birdie," said Trevino on the eve of today's opening round.

The 7,032-yard, 36-35-71 Sedgefield Country Club course, already damp from a freak spring snowfall last weekend, was soaked with rain Wednesday. There's a 20 per cent chance of rain today.

"The guy who hits best from tee to green is going to win this one," said Trevino.

Trevino and Arnold Palmer, who's hoping a week of tournament competition will sharpen his game to Masters form, rate among the favorites to capture the $40,000 first prize.

Palmer shot a five-under-par 66 in Wednesday's pro-am preliminary, slogging around the course in chilly 50-degree weather, and he was pleased with the performance.

"I played fairly good, a little better than I have lately," he said.

Also in the hefty field of 147, which includes four local amateurs, are Gary Player, winner of last week's Greater New Orleans Open, and Tony Jacklin, who captured the Greater Jacksonville Open two weeks ago.

Jack Nicklaus, this year's leading money winner, is taking the week off to practice for the April 6-9 Masters at Augusta, Ga., but Palmer decided he'd rather play.

Palmer bypassed Greensboro in favor of the practice tee last year, but after shooting a 69 at Jacksonville he entered here.

"I'm just trying to get my game sharp for the Masters," he said.

Palmer recently started wearing glasses and is experimenting with contact lenses. He said he might try the contacts in tournament competition this week.

"I'm having a little trouble getting used to them," he said. "I guess everybody does."

Almost as much as the money and the exemption, however, the Greensboro victory gave Allin a sense of recognition here that he has nowhere else on the tour.

"It's a good feeling to be recognized," said Allin. "I go to so many tournaments unrecognized."

NBA PLAYOFFS

Boston Smashes Atlanta

BOSTON (UPI)—It's one down, they're one up and the Boston Celtics know they can't sit back now.

With a hefty boost from its bench,Boston returned to the National Basketball Association playoffs after a two-year lapse Wednesday night and drubbed the Atlanta Hawks, 126-108. John Havlicek had 32 points to lead all scorers and added 10 assists,but it was a couple of reserves who ignited the Celts when they needed it.

Louis Hudson dropped in eight of 10 shots in the first period and the Hawks took a 30-28 lead at the end of the quarter. However, guard Artie Williams and Steve Kuberski triggered the Celtics at the start of the second period.

Kuberski sandwiched two buckets around a jump shot by still ailing Pete Maravich and then Williams took over. He passed off for three baskets and Dave Cowens tapped in a rebound of one of Williams' shots to make it 40-32 and the Celtics never were headed.

"I've always maintained you win with defense," Havlicek said later, "and we did." Coach Tom Heinsohn echoed the thought, praising the play of Kuberski, Jo Jo White and Don Chaney.

A couple of doors down the hall, Atlanta Coach Richie Guerin sounded like the other side of the coin. "We lost on defense. We gambled too much at halfcourt," he said, referring to the Hawks' missed attempts to steal the ball and stop the fastbreak.

"And we just got beat off the boards," he went on. When the series resumes Friday night in Atlanta, Guerin said, "We'll try and stop gambling and try to be more aggressive on the boards." The Celtics held a 62-46 rebound advantage with Cowens grabbing 16 and Kuberski pulling down 13.

Following Havlicek for Boston was White with 25 points, Cowens with 23 and Kuberski with 15. Hudson topped the visitors with 29 points, Walt Bellamy added 20 and Maravich had 19.

Maravich is still recovering from mononucleosis, Guerin said, and is about 20 punds underweight. The former LSU All-America played 35 minutes.

The Boston-Atlanta matchup was the lone NBA playoff game Wednesday night. Los Angeles (1-0) entertains Chicago and Golden State (1-0) invades Milwaukee tonight while the Baltimore-New York series opens Friday night at Baltimore.

Horwitz Wins Again In Bicycle Racing

It's beginning to sound like a broken record: Mark Horwitz of Tamalpais High School won such-and-such a bicycle race over such-and-such a course, etc.

Yesterday it was an 11-mile race from Novato to the Lucas Valley hill, comprising the third stage of a four-stage race. Joe Breeze and Kevin Linscott, both of Tam, grabbed second and third. The fourth stage was scheduled for this morning and consisted of a race from Fairfax to Nicasio.

Warriors, Milwaukee Tonight

"A national magazine printed an article before the playoffs began that said the television networks didn't plan any coverage of the Bucks-Warriors series because it wasn't even going to be close," Mieuli said. "We read that article at our post-season dinner."

Then he smiled. At the time his team was 10 points up on the Bucks and time was running out. Eventually the Warriors posted a 117-106 win to take a big 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven opening round of the western conference playoffs.

"Let me know when I can relax," Mieuli said as the seconds ticked off.

"There's an old Japanese proverb," he said. "Freely translated it means 'sometimes even a monkey falls out of a tree.'"

Mieuli was obviously talking about the perch as world champions and as heavy favorites over the Warriors where the Bucks sat preening their feathers.

The Bucks were obviously hurt by their personnel situation. Guard Jon McGlocklin is in the hospital with a bad back. Wally Jones played for the first

Playoff Hopes End For Seals

Pronovost's 30th goal of the season climaxed a three-goal Pittsburgh explosion in the third period Wednesday night and gave the playoff-hopeful Penguins a 5-4 victory that knocked the California Golden Seals out of NHL West playoff contention.

The victory shoved Pittsburgh into a fourth place tie with Philadelphia in the NHL West with a Saturday showdown scheduled on the Flyers' ice. The two teams will be vying for the fourth division vacancy in the playoffs.

Pronovost's 20-footer into the deep right corner capped a Pittsburgh comeback from the short end of a 4-2 score at the end of two periods. California had jumped into a 2-0 lead in

Rupp Drops Idea Of Political Career

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI)— Retiring University of Kentucky basketball Coach Adolph Rupp has decided not to take up a career in politics afterall.

The 70-year-old Rupp, winningest coach in college history with 879 victories, indicated last weekend he would seek the Democratic nomination for Congress from Kentucky's 6th District if the Kentucky Athletic Associatioc made him abide by the university's mandatory retirement rule.

Rupp said he changed his mind because he did not want to spend as much time away from his family as the job would require. Rupp said his decision came after a family meeting.

Last Sunday, prior to coaching a college all-star team to victory in Louisville! Rupp said:

I've been thinking about running for Congress for a long time. I feel I can do as good a job as any of the candidates running."

time after being sidelined for a couple of weeks with a pulled hamstring muscle. And Oscar Robertson is still trying to get that fine edge back after missing a half a dozen games with an abdominal strain.

The Bucks looked tired — "Like we didn't want to win," said coach Larry Costello.

"I don't know if Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) wasn't feeling well, but he didn't play like the Kareem I know," Costello added.

One of the reasons might have been Nate Thurmond who held Abdul-Jabbar to 28 points and got 20 rebounds. Thurmond — especially in the third quarter — hit several long jump shots when Abdul-Jabbar left him alone.

"Nobody in this league believes Nate can hit those shots," Mieuli said. "They just can't leave him alone out there."

Now the Bucks have to regroup for Thursday night's game and then for the next two on the West Coast. The Warriors have to take that shot in the arm they got Tuesday night and keep the adrenalin flowing.

Jim Barnett, who got 30 points against the Bucks and was the sparkplug for Golden State was also concerned about the pre-playoff predictions.

"Jimmy the Greek picked us at 25-1," Barnett said. "Now those are long odds and I sort of like long odds."

Another game like Tuesday night and the Warriors are going to shorten those odds, and maybe, shake "that monkey out of his tree."

Marin Series Figures Told

By LEW CODDINGTON

With 95 per cent of the precincts reporting, nobody has any idea who won in the Marin County Athletic League's continuing quest to defeat its various non-league baseball rivals.

Before yesterday, the eight MCAL teams had a combined 44-43 won-lost record against their foes. Tamalpais and San Rafael played yesterday, and powerful Marin Catholic plays in a tournament beginning today.

MCAL teams showed considerable delight in drubbing their neighbors from up north. The log stands at 13-11 against North Bay League teams and 10-6 against Sonoma County League aggregations.

Marin Catholic has been devastating in this regard, going 7-0 against the two leagues and defeating Ukiah, the defending NBL champion, which has seven players returning. In fact, remove the Wildcats and the MCAL is 10-11 against the NBL and 6-6 against the SCL.

Peninsula teams have pounded Marin teams five straight times. Other than that, Marin has broken even: 12-12 against San Francisco, 6-6 against the East Bay and 3-3 against everybody else.

No Score — Every once in a while, a coach is unable to furnish the results of his team's competition. Reasons vary, but the award for the best one has to go to Bill O'Bayley, who coaches Terra Linda golf.

"The other school's coach had the scorecard," O'Bayley said of Tuesday's match at Moreau of Hayward, "when he got a call saying his wife was going to have a baby. So he rushed off — taking the card with him."

Huh? — San Rafael Tuesday played a non-tournament baseball game against a tournament opponent on the tournament field, and how do you explain that to the readers in one sentence?

The Golden Gate holiday tourney, played at Big Rec in the city, has six teams which play once a day over four days. Each day, two teams have a bye as far as the tournament bracket is concerned, but they play each other anyway. Coach Jack Sims likes the setup, especially since his team broke a two-game losing streak in the non-tournament tournament encounter, beating John O'Connell of San Francisco, 12-5.

Name Game — There is an MCAL swimmer named Drake, but naturally, he doesn't go to Drake. He goes to Redwood. First name is Dave.

There is also a track runner named Terra, but of course, he doesn't go to Terra Linda. He goes to Marin Catholic. First name is Vic. Now, if he had a sister named Linda . . .

Giants Finalize Pitching Plans

PALM SPRINGS — One more stop on the Cactus League trail and the San Francisco Giants will head homeward for Candlestick Park where they will open the 1972 National League baseball season a week from today against the San Diego Padres.

Following today's exhibition with the California Angels, the Giants will bus to Yuma for their final spring tuneup sessions Saturday and Sunday against the same Padres they will meet in Candlestick April 6.

Juan Marichal and Sam McDowell are scheduled for the full nine innings Saturday and Sunday against the Padres just as they will be next Thursday and Saturday in games No. 1 and No. 2 of the 1972 major league campaign. Friday April 7 is an open date.

CHARLIE FOX, a careful planner, arranged his pitching rotation so that Marichal and McDowell would be in the No. 1 and No. 2 assignments for the concluding pre-season games. As long ago as last November when the Giants got McDowell from Cleveland for Gaylord Perry and Frank Duffy, Fox fixed his rotation so that it would feature Marichal and McDowell in such practical fashion.

"I wouldn't be much of a manager," said Fox, "if I didn't set up the rotation so that Marichal and McDowell would get their final tuneups in our final Cactus League games."

NOBODY COULD argue with Fox on the soundness of such strategy since primary success of the Giants this season depends on Marichal and McDowell. Final success of the Giants when the 162-game schedule ends next Oct. 4 will depend not only on hopeful 20-game seasons from Marichal and McDowell but reasonably good seasons from John Cumberland and Don Carrithers in the No. 3 and No. 4 pitching roles.

Cumberland and Carrithers won the starting assignments behind Marichal and McDowell during the 25-game Cactus League schedule. But that came as no surprise since they were in the No. 3 and No. 4 slots when the 1971 season ended.

Actually, there were no real surprises throughout the entire spring encampment. Even the fact that Fox had Dave Kingman batting in the third position until last weekend was no surprise. Fox had been toying with that idea since the end of last season when he first disclosed that he intended to put Kingman at third base to get Kingman's big bat into the daily lineup.

THE PRESSURE of batting No. 3 proved too severe for Kingman and he was dropped to No. 6 and Ken Henderson was moved into the No. 3 pressure spot where the team captain, Willie Mays, had been batting for two decades except for a temporary leadoff role four seasons ago.

Mays now is the leadoff man and Fox hopes to keep the captain in the No. 1 position for two reasons: (1) Mays' unparalleled skill in running the bases and scoring runs; (2) whenever Mays, who will be 41 May 6, is getting necessary rest there will be no juggling of the rest of the batting order. All Fox will have to do is write Jimmy Rosario's name or Jimmy Howarth's name into the No. 1 position.

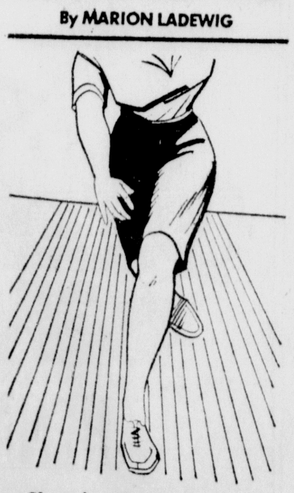
BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG



If you're going to be a consistently accurate bowler, there's one thing you must do every time: your left foot must be perpendicular to the foul line at the completion of your delivery. This makes it much easier to swing your arm in the straight pendulum, rather than tilting it to one side or the other as you do when your left foot doesn't finish in that position.

ATLANTA — The fourth annual Naismith Trophy will be presented to UCLA sophomore Bill Walton at an Atlanta Tipoff Club dinner tonight for his selection as the "Outstanding College Basketball Player of the Year."

NEW YORK — Otto Petty and Al Williams, two hustling, pint-sized guards who led their respective teams to second place finishes in post season tournaments, were named to United Press International's Small America Team for players 5-foot-10 and under.

Williams, who at 5-foot-9 was a major contributor to Niagara's surprise showing in the National Invitation Tournament in which they lost in the championship game to Maryland, averaged 14 points per game during the regular season and made the NIT All-Tournament team.

Petty, a tiny 5-foot-7 backcourt man who performed brilliantly for Florida State during the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships, helped the Seminoles reach the final game against UCLA.

Diving

DALLAS — Capt. Micki King of the Air Force dethroned Cynthia Potter of Houston and Indiana University last night in the National Amateur Athletic Union Women's 1-meter Indoor Diving Championships.

The 27-year-old Miss King took advantage of a sour first finals dive by the 21-year-old Texan on a forward two and one-half tuck and slowly pulled in front after being a strong third in the morning preliminaries.

Hockey

MONTREAL — The Stanley Cup now carries the same $15,000 price tag the Super Bowl has.

National Hockey League officials announced yesterday that each player on the Stanley Cup champions will receive $15,000. That represents an almost 100 per cent increase over last year when the players received $2,500 for winning each of the first two rounds and $3,000 more for the Stanley Cup. The total prize package in hockey now totals almost a million dollars, an increase of over $210,000 from last year.

IN SWIM MARKS

Terra Linda, Redwood Tops

With Redwood and Terra Linda high schools trying furiously to defeat each other in last Friday's swimming meet, the real victim was the clock.

The best Marin County Athletic League dual meet times of the year were recorded in six different events. Rick DeMont of Terra Linda and Spencer Eldred of Redwood each set two new standards.

DeMont swam the 200-yard individual medley in 2:06.0 to lop five seconds off the mark set previously by Paul Cane of Redwood. DeMont also swam the 100 freestyle in 49.5.

Eldred seized best-time honors in the 200 free with 1:54.6 and swept the Trojans' Rick Lund off the board in the 400 free with a 4:06.2.

Cane gained a measure of revenge by setting a new standard in the 100 breaststroke, 1:03.5, thus turning Terra Linda's Keith Strange into an historical figure. Cane also participated in the 200 medley relay team that did 1:46.0. Others were Pete Brunstetter, Corwin (Corky) Hull and John Redig.

The best times:

Redwood, San Marin Pace Track Records

The faces may change but the uniforms remain the same as San Marin and Redwood high schools continue to record the best times in Marin County Athletic League dual track meets.

San Marin has five bests, including 440-yard dash man Bob Briot, who replaced teammate Ron Zechlin on top with a 52.4-second clocking last week, and long-jumper Randy Colfer, who did 21 feet, 5½ inches.

Both Mustang relay teams sliced off some time, with the 440 relay clocking now 45.2 and the mile relay time 3:33.4. Gary Lathrop's 2:01.5 half-mile withstood last week's assault.

Redwood's Brian Tracy ran a 4:38.2 to replace teammate Ned Overend on top, while Kip Kermoian pole-vaulted 12-6 to oust Drake's Rolf Bell. Discus man Darrell Elder improved his best from 145-9½ to 150-2½, and two-miler Pete Sweeney lopped off 12 seconds for 9:52.0.

Other new leaders are Mark Lowey of Terra Linda in the triple jump (40-9½) and Ed Harris of Novato in the 120 high hurdles.

Virginia Earns ABA 2nd Spot

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Virginia Squires figure they're halfway to the Eastern Division finals.

Virginia clinched second place Wednesday night by beating the Memphis Pros, 123-99, and now host the fourth place Floridians Friday night in a best-of-seven first round American Basketball Association playoff series.

The Squires beat the Floridians in seven of 11 meetings this season and despite the absence of league jumper Charlie Scott, the club believes it can win its division semifinal.

New York, hoping that Virginia would lose so it could meet the Squires in a tiebreaking game, finished the season in third place and must face Eastern champion Kentucky. The Colonels, who beat the Nets in eight of 11 games, entertain New York in their Saturday night playoff opener.

In the Western Division, second place Indians tips off its playoff opener against fourth place Denver in Indianapolis Friday night and third place Dallas visits champion Utah in Salt Lake City Saturday night.

Utah finished its season with a 112-109 victory over Denver Wednesday night, while Kentucky whipped the Floridians, 117-109, and Indiana routed Pittsburgh, 128-113, on the final night of the season.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Land Stock Is Always Valuable Portfolio Item

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Should I hold or sell 1,000 Alico Land (OTC)?—S.R.

Q. I own 426 Alico Land which I received from Atlantic Coast Line — now Seaboard Cost Line Shares pay no dividend but I am willing to hold if company has a bright future.—D.F.

A. There are a number of reasons for retaining these shares, none of which are related to Alico's unimpressive earnings record. In the fiscal year ended August, 8 cents a share was earned and in the November quarter a deficit of 14 cents was reported. Operations include cattle raising, growing citrus fruit and timber plus a 50 per cent interest in a citrus spraying helicopter service. Some 216,626 acres are held in various parts of Florida. Land, plus a breeding herd of 10,500 head are carried on the balance sheet at a value of $7.4 million. Giving no value to the herd, land would be carried at $27 per acre, obviously only a fraction of its true worth.

A recent merger offer worth $56 million in stock was turned down by management. A director recentiy acquired 26,000 shares, increasing his direct and indirect holdings to 42,163 shares. Current ratio at Aug. 31, 1971, was a healthy 4.2 to 1, with long-term debt $1.1 million. With Florida land development once again attracting investor attention, shares should be held.

Q. In Oct., 1971, you suggested Brad Ragan (ASE) for appreciation. After the 6 months are up, should I continue to hold for further gains?—T.P.

A. Although shares have had a fast run-up since mid-Feb. and are trading at about 42x estimated fiscal 1972 results, fundamentally, growth prospects remain excellent.

In the last five years earnings have grown at a compound-average annual rate of 40 per cent. Operating results in the first 9 months through Jan. 31 showed no sign of slowing this rate. Sales were up 60 per cent and net income doubled. For the full fiscal year earnings should exceed $1/share by a good margin. After moving up 15 points in less than a month, consolidation in the mid-40s may be expected.

Early-Hour Hunt For Glamors

NEW YORK (UPI) —Investors went hunting in the glamors during the first two hours today as the stock market moved higher in fairly active trading.

The two-hour turnover amounted to more than 5,440,000 shares. Advances topped declines, 658 to 452, among the 1,497 issues crossing the tape.

With the stock market closed Good Friday, analysts said some of the buying may involve short covering. Also, investors were doing selective buying, particularly in the glamors.

Also apparent was block trading, an indication institutions were active. Analysts said some mutual funds were readjusting their portfolios.

British Petroleum was the most active New York Stock Exchange issue, up ⅛ at 13½. Trading in this issue included a block of 170,000 shares at 13 3-8, unchanged.

Among the stronger glamors were Bausch & Lomb, up 3¾; Polaroid and Xerox, each 2 1-2; Levitz Furniture, 2, and Itek, 1 3-4. Also showing strength was Alaska Interstate, up 2⅛.

Electronics and computer strong spots were Texas Instruments, up 2 1-4; Fairchild Camera, 1 3-8, and IBM, 1.

A block of 205,000 shares at 43 1-8, off 1-4, helped sweep American Telephone & Telegraph onto the most active list.

OTHER PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

By WAT TAKESHITA

Real Estate Office, Two Shops In New Building In Mill Valley

A real estate office and two shops have opened up in a new building at the corner of East Blithedale and Sunnyside avenues in Mill Valley.

Robert R. Bergis and George J. Hagstrom have established their new real estate office at 85 East Blithedale, across from the post office. Both have been in Marin real estate for more than0 years. Bergis specializes in commercial-industrial while Hagstrom manages the residential department.

Sales associates are Gloria Hayden of Larkspur, Margaret Rees of Mill Valley, Jack Richardson of Greenbrae, Ron Thompson of Sausalito, and Jack Donnellan of Tiburon. Anne Owens is secretary.

A veteran San Francisco advertising executive, Benefield was affiliated with the Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample agency, Botsford Ketchum Inc., and Campbell-Ewald Co.

TETONS WEST Mountain Shop is opening next door, at 87 East Blithedale. Owners are young Jeffrey Brody and James McInnis, both 1967 graduates of Terra Linda High School.

"We did a lot of hiking and back packing and realized that Marin needs high quality gear," said Brody. Tetons West carries such brands as North Face and Class-Five gear from Berkeley. The store also sells used gear on a consignment basis. The store is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday and from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. on weekdays except Tuesday, when the shop is closed.

CHEESE UNLIMITED is already operating in the same building at 89 East Blithedale, with Davood Kohanzadeh in charge.

The proprietor is a Persian, who learned cooking in France and managed a restaurant in Berkeley for two years. He has more than 110 cheeses both imported and domestic, meats, home-made salads, lunch sandwiches, wine and beer, and fresh bagel and lox.

WILLIAM R. BERNARD Jr. of Terra Linda was promoted to trust officer in Wells Fargo Bank's trust services, San Francisco.

Bernard joined Wells Fargo in 1938 at King City and served in Salinas and in San Francisco. He was assistant trust officer before the promotion.

Lougee

FRANK E. LOUGEE of Tiburon has joined Martel Scroggin Advertising Inc. as vice president of marketing. For the past three years he was an independent marketing consultant. Before that, he was vice president in charge of advertising and public realtions for Wells Fargo Bank.

JAMES R. BENEFIELD of Greenbrae has become a principal in Levinger and Associates, a Santa Rosa advertising and public relations agency.

BOTTLE COLLECTORS might be interested in the official $100,000 collection of Jim Beam regal china bottles now on display at P & X Market in East San Rafael at 688 Point San Pedro Road, Loch Lomond.

The display will continue through next Monday. Some Beam bottles have brought prices in excess of $3,000, while bottles in the $150 to $250 range are not uncommon.

YOU CAN TEST your ability to spot counterfeit bills at an exhibit to be displayed from March 31 through April 4 at Sierra National Bank in Tiburon.

The exhibit, prepared by the Federal Reserve Bank, permits each viewer to test his ability by pressing buttons numbered to correspond with 16 different notes on display.

HERE'S AN INDICATION of Marin's tremendous drawing power. Carroll A. Snyker, manager of the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau, recently inserted an ad in the travel edition of the Seattle Times to get an idea of the interest Pacific Northwest vacationers have in visiting Marin.

As of March, Snyker had received 171 requests for further information.

ROBERT A. DAVIES of Belvedere was honored last week on his 40th anniversary as a New York Life Insurance Co. agent. He has insured more than 6,000 persons for more than $55 million during his career to date.

THE WASHETTE at 1224 Grant Avenue, Novato, will have new owners from the first of April. James L. Zoeller and his wife Betty will take over from the estate of James A. Manning, who died of a heart attack last August.

Mrs. Zoeller, who will manage The Washette, said the hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. It will be closed on Thursdays and Sundays. The laundry takes in clothes by the pound (price will go up from 15 cents to 20 cents per pound on Saturday to wash, dry and return them folded and ready for the dresser.

McPhail's Plans Petaluma Site

McPhail's Inc. of San Rafael hopes to have a new 20,000-square-foot warehouse and office building built in Petaluma by fall of this year.

The company is buying a 5.2-acre site at the corner of Lakeville Road and Highway 101. It will be a distribution center for television, appliances and fuels.

Other McPhail services, such as propane and butane gas and paving and building materials, will be centralized at the new plant.

Different Low-Income Housing

By CHARLES E. DOLE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

MILFORD, Mass. — To the developers, it's Rolling Green. To the tenants, it's home. But to some of the low-income people in the 304-unit town house-apartment project 30 miles out of Boston, it may be the best home they've ever had.

In total, it's an experiment in mixed income, with all of the tenants enjoying the same amenities and facilities no matter what rent they pay. The welfare recipient may be paying $100 less rent than his neighbor — but few seem to care.

Developed by Myron Roberts and Sidney J. Rosenthal, Rolling Green is one more chapter in the continuing success story of the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, now in its third year as an independent lending institution within the Massachusetts Department of Community Affairs (MHFA).

The first two years were so successful that out-of-state agencies are turning to Massachusetts and asking: "How come?"

Sixteen other states already have state finance agencies similar to MHFA, with perhaps a dozen of them active. And more states are becoming interested.

But MHFA is different. "The main difference between the Massachusetts agency and other state agencies is that the others are geared to middle income housing," explains William J. White, executive director of MHFA.

"In Massachusetts, we have an income mix — and that's what sets us apart."

At least 25 per cent of all housing units in each project must be rented to low-income people at rentals they can afford.

About 35 to 40 per cent fall into the category of moderate income, with total family income ranging from a low of $7,000 up to a top of $12,000.

The remainder pay the full market rent, which because of the economies incumbent in the MHFA program, may fall $40 to $50 a month below that for comparable facilities built with standard financing.

The low-income tenants, and many with moderate income, qualify for federal subsidies. This may reduce a full market rental of, say, $185 a month to maybe $135. Then, in addition to this federal money, the low-income tenants may also qualify under the leased housing or rental supplement programs, which could further cut the rent to well under $100 a month. The rent should not exceed one quarter of a family's total income, no matter what it is.

Not only are the rentals kept low, but there is the social concomitant that low-income people, where there is a need, may learn to upgrade their living practices by closer contact with neighbors of much higher incomes.

Roberts, who got both feet into an MHFA financed project in Amherst, says "the low income family's neighbor is one of his best friends. It's better than any welfare agency.

"By mixing income levels in housing built under the financial aegis of MHFA, the economically and socially deprived family gets a good lesson in how to improve his home by upgrading his own approach to it."

Subsidized tenants are not being herded into a single area of a complex but instead are, under MHFA rules, being mixed in through the project.

The mix idea is so successful overall that observers, shy of the idea at first, may have to agree that the mix can work out. The outcome does not have to be blight.

Out of his three MHFA projects so far, Roberts reports only one failure — "and we were able to get the offending party out of the project without any difficulty." That was in Amherst, a college community in western Massachusetts.

The company also has had problems with a small militant group here in Milford opposed to all apartments in the town and all subsidies to low income tenants. Too, Roberts reports the tax assessment as "much higher than we had expected." But the bumps in the road are not enough to discourage him.

Like hundreds of other areas all over the U.S., Massachusetts communities have been struggling with ways to build low and moderate income housing, an always difficult and controversial issue.

Public housing generally has been discredited as the wrong approach to viable housing for low-income families. High crime, slovenly social practices, rampant vandalism, bare bone facilities, and high vacancy rates have doomed public housing in most areas where it has been tried.

The MHFA is a fresh approach to the whole issue of where to house the disadvantaged who, most agree, deserve at least a viable opportunity to climb higher than their inadequate incomes would allow.

Conventional financing today can produce new or rehabilitated housing for the average family with an income of $16,000 to $18,000 a year. Knocked completely out of the market are people with low and moderate incomes.

One of the nice things about the MHFA is that it is acceptable to a whole lot of people even though it is a quasi-state financing agency.

"Bill White does it without arousing the ire of anyone," reports Andrew Hickey, executive secretary of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. "He has good rapport with the low-income people and tenants' groups, and the developers work well with it because these guys understand real estate.

"Too, they work on a profit motive basis, but they serve the public need as well." And, he might add, it's putting a whole lot of property onto the tax rolls of the state.

People such as Myron Roberts had never before got involved with a redevelopment authority and always had said: "Stay away from the subsidized programs."

Yet he and his partner, Sidney J. Rosenthal, are moving with this one and they're happy with the overall success. They were the first developers to go on line with the agency and signed a contract for the Amherst complex two years ago last January.

Now they're operating in Milford and Fall River as well.

At Rolling Green there are 23 apartment buildings, plus a community recreation building and large swimming pool. All units have balconies or patios and each Mansard-roof building has a brick facade. Both apartments and town houses are included.

Rentals include electric heat, individual air conditioning, electricity, parking space, and use of all recreational facilities, including the pool and tennis courts.

MHFA operates at no direct cost to the taxpayer and it does not add to the state's debt. It gets its funds through the sale of tax exempt bonds, and the fees charged to the developers make the agency self-supporting.

The agency has the legislative authority to float up to $1 billion in bonds and so far has lent about half that amount. It is headed by John Ryan, president of Ryan, Elliott Co., Inc., a major real-estate firm.

Massachusetts, according to housing studies in the state, needs at least 20,000 new housing units each year for the next 10 years. MHFA-financed projects account for at least half of this demand.

In sheer volume, the program is a major success, even though it may begin to slow down because of lessened federal subsidies or just the grinding of bureaucratic gears. Perhaps even more important than the numbers is the increasing evidence that a basic premise of the program is working — that of mixing the income levels in all the projects, and even in all the buildings of a single project.

PROJECT — Up to 60 per cent of the tenants in this 304-unit town house and apartment project in Milford, Mass., have their rent subsidized by federal money. Known as Rolling Green, it is part of the success story of the Massachusetts Housing Finance Authority now mixing low and moderate income tenants with those who pay the full market rental.

Independent-Journal
SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

38 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1972 EDITORIAL PAGE

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

How Much Open Space Can We Buy?

Preserving land in open space is highly desirable. It also may be expensive.

How expensive is indicated by the six-year capital improvement program proposed by Marin County Administrator John F. Barrows. It calls for an outlay of $8,604,000 by the county for park, recreational and open space lands between now and the end of fiscal 1977-78.

Yet these acquisitions would add only about 12 per cent to the amount of such land in the county.

The Independent-Journal did a little tabulation in analyzing Barrows' program, and found that Marin now has 88,886 acres in parks, recreational uses and open space — about 23 per cent of its total area.

THIS DOES NOT include such things as agricultural lands, backyard swimming pools, or private estates; nor swimming pools attached to apartment houses and in condominium developments. All these contribute either to open space or recreation.

The backyard swimming pool, the golf course, the riding club arena also have an advantage over publicly owned facilities in that they increase instead of decrease the tax base.

Of the 88,886 acres found in park-recreation-open space categories in Marin, 3,528 acres were in private ownership. Most of this total is included in wildlife refuges and land purchase by conservation groups to be kept open, but some of it is in golf courses, tennis clubs, riding clubs, etc.

This leaves 81,358 acres removed from the tax rolls by being placed in public ownership for parks, recreational uses of various kinds, greenbelts and other open space. The county administrator proposes to add 1,000 acres or more to this by county purchase in the next six years.

WE ALL LIKE our open space. It's one of the reasons Marin is a delightful place to live. But how much is enough? And will county purchase of 1,000 acres for such purpose really mean 1,000 more acres kept open?

The $8,604,000 estimated purchase cost is only the beginning. Removing that amount of land from the tax rolls means higher taxes on all remaining property — to pay for the open space itself and to make up the share of taxes for other purposes that was levied on those 1,000 acres.

It also tends to inflate the values of remaining lands. If half of an area is taken for parks and open space, the value of the other half is forced up.

THE RESULT is that the remaining land becomes too valuable — and subject to too high taxes — to be kept in agricultural use or as privately owned open lands. So it is subdivided. This may mean that, despite the purchase, there is no more open space than there was before, maybe not even as much.

We hope the county supervisors will bear these things in mind as they examine Barrows' proposals. We wouldn't want to discourage the county from providing bike trails or adding some new parks. But before it saddles all of us with the cost of land for open space, we'd like to be sure we're getting what we pay for.

Bill Shows Legislator Needs To Study History

By EARL G. WATERS

Not too long ago a state senator complained that newsmen should be licensed after meeting certain educational standards. A counter suggestion was that perhaps this same should apply to legislators.

The thought relating to the lawmakers was offered facetiously, but in the face of some proposals now being made it might not be too bad an idea.

Certain bills which have been introduced would make it seem that there are members of the Legislature who might profit by studying selected subjects, like the history of California. One such example is a measure authored by Sen. Anthony Beilenson, D-Los Angelas. It would require legislative review of all Public Utility Commission rate decisions.

AT THE TURN of the century this state was mired down in such a mess of political corruption that the telling of it requires a full-length book. Suffice to say that the root of this unsavory condition was principally the public utilities.

One of the most powerful men in the state was William F. Herrin. He held no political office but, as chief counsel for Southern Pacific, he controlled the political bosses. Another was Theodore V. Halsey who likewise held no public office but, as political agent for Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph Co., exercised unhealthy control over the politicans of the day.

The seat of political power in those days was San Francisco. Not only did Herrin and Halsey dominate San Francisco political boss Abe Ruef, they dictated who should be elected legislators and even governor.

In a revolt against corrupt politics, newspapers, chiefly the San Francisco Examiner owned by William Randolph Hearst and Fremont Older's San Francisco Bulletin, launched a reform movement.

In the crusade that followed Older was kidnapped, Francis J. Heney, who had been appointed special prosecutor, was shot, and Hiram Johnson stepped in to take his place. Johnson sent Ruef to prison and as a result was elected governor in 1910 on a campaign slogan of "kick the Southern Pacific out of politics."

It was Johnson's reforms, including strengthening of the Railroad Commission, forerunner of today's Public Utility Commission, which effectively drove the SP and other utilities out of politics.

BEILENSON'S PROPOSAL is somewhat surprising. He is viewed as an idealist, crusader and reformer. It is not likely that he would want to create a situation which would bring back the conditions which existed in Johnson's day.

It is more probable that he is not fully aware of these events which may have transpired even before his father was born. For Beilenson is only 40 years old and has lived in California only 15 years. He was elected to the Assembly in 1962 and is serving his sixth year in the Senate.

But to place final decisions on utility rates in the hands of the Legislature would seem to be tempting fate to a return of the old days. Even if this is not a real danger, it is inconceivable to figure how the Legislature could intelligently review utility rates. A single rate hearing can occupy days and even weeks of testimony with many witnesses and voluminous documents in evidence.

However, if Beilenson is unhappy with the present actions of the commission he is not without responsibility for this condition. After all, even though the commissioners are appointed by the governor, they must be confirmed by the Senate.

Statement Of One Candidate Missing

The sample ballot for the Larkspur City Council arrived over the week end. Enclosed with the ballot is a "Candidate's Statement of Qualifications".

To my surprise and annoyance, only six of the seven candidates were listed. I don't know whether this is unusual in elections or not, but at best it seems very strange, particularly since this material is mailed at public expense.

My basic concern, however, is the fact that I found this information in other elections to be helpful in making a selection. It would seem to follow then that in the interest of an informed voting public, all candidates should have their qualifications printed in the insert.

The candidate omitted is Joan Sestak, whose credentials are most impressive. The degree magna cum laude — the whole bit, if that means anything in today's politics. Joan, moreover, has been active in Larkspur affairs helping improve the library, organizing a town meeting — all geared to build and improve community life.

Aside from that, Joan is very pretty. Her presence in the Larkspur Council Chambers would indeed be welcome. She would certainly be a distraction from the holes in the ceiling. It's all very strange.

Little Public Interest In ITT Exposures

This is in mild protest to your newspaper's extensive and first-page coverage of the "ITT affair." I submit it will be a sad by-product of the Justice Department's "involvement" if the attendant unfortunate publicity is allowed to divert their attention from their proper object; to wit, "crime on the streets." It seems to me that too extensive newspaper coverage of this affair might well accomplish this unhappy result.

While I may not have read all that has been carried by yourselves concerning this affair, I think it can fairly be stated that nothing in the disclosed dealings between the conglomerate and the Justice Department really shocks us or offends our sense of morality. Historically in this country finangles of this kind have their own respectability provided they are not grubby, petty or undignified. Now there is certainly nothing petty about the sum of $400,000. I personally observed the comport of our attorney general and the president of ITT before the Senate Investigating Committee on TV. Each comported himself with commendable tolerance towards the inquisitors and with a becoming admirable dignity.

I think we of the public find little of interest in this matter. I think our overall attitude is very nicely summed up in the statement of a friend of mine who should probably be nameless here. He is presently unemployed but is nonetheless an avid follower of the news. His comment — "I was a sap not to finish my education."

Don't Overlook Marin City Boys' Club

You are to be commended for your editorial supporting the organization of a Boys' Club in Central Marin. Our county has long needed more recreational facilities for our young people.

However, your omission of the Marin City Boys' Club in your reference to existing clubs in the county is ominous, particularly when you refer to the Novato Boys' Club as perhaps the strongest in the county.

Please remember, the Marin City Boys' Club was the first to receive a charter from Boys' Clubs of America, making it an accredited agency of BCA . . .

The Marin City Boys' Club operates six days a week, serving about 300 youngsters in Marin City. It has a responsible board of directors, its financial records are audited annually, and we have a viable program attuned to the critical needs of youngsters in Southern Marin.

We applaud the efforts to start a new club. But we add the caution that planning for new clubs should be sympathetically meshed with the programs and financial needs of existing facilities. The bold facts of the matter are that clubs serving a predominantly white population will attract greater financial support than one which serves a predominantly black population, such as the Marin City Boys' Club.

The proposed new club will need extensive financial support. If fund-raising programs for annual support are undertaken without recognition of the burden that such activities will impose on a small club with limited membership, then such activities may well spell the end of a facility like the Marin City Boys' Club. . .

Class Action Suit Hits Property Owners

It is highly probable that such use of the cowardly legal device known as a class action will actually in itself precipitate a devaluation of my property and thus cause me and other property owners a personal financial loss which otharwise would not take place.

Boise-Cascade made no misleading claims to me.

They promised that a lake of a certain size and volume of water would be created for the recreational use of property owners in the development.

This was done.

They promised that an eighteen hole golf course along with a caddy house, pro shop and a Country Club building with various facilities would be constructed.

This was done.

This was done.

This was done.

They did not promise me a profit.

They did point out that general land values in California had been appreciating for a number of years. Any California resident knows from personal observation that this is true.

It is unconscionable that a small group of greedy people including some publicity seeking state officials and hungry lawyers are permitted to attack one of the nation's major corporations and in so doing endanger the personal assets of innocent parties.

Crossover Votes Can Upset Wisconsin Primary Predictions

MADISON, Wis. — By all proper, professional appraisals the Wisconsin primary on April 4 should go a long way toward sorting out the Democratic candidates and foreshadowing the likely presidential nominee. The latest polls show Hubert Humphrey with 18 per cent, George McGovern 16, Edmund Muskie 13, and Henry Jackson 12.

Alabama's George Wallace will draw from six to eight per cent. In 1968 when President Nixon carried this state by a small margin, Wallace got 127,000 votes, which was about six per cent of the total. So in Wisconsin, a progressive state, Wallace, if the pros and the polls are correct, will not play the spoiler's role as he did in Florida.

BUT THIS RECKONS without the concealed weapon which can irreparably damage the process of choice in the Democratic party. That is the right of the voter under state law to ask on primary day for a Democratic or a Republican ballot regardless of which party he is registered in.

Since the Republicans have no contest in their own primary with an incumbent president, how better to cripple the Democrats than to vote for Wallace?

This intention is not likely to show up in any poll. In the white suburbs around Milwaukee and in the Republican strongholds throughout the state, the Republican voter in the secrecy of the polling booth can at one and the same time deal a blow to the other party and express a private opposition to busing as embodied in the little Caesar from the South.

Here is another aspect of the lunatic system of statewide primaries in 23 states and the District of Columbia, which threatens to turn 1972 into a bloody shambles. It threatens, too, to vitiate the electoral process and so undermine the two-party system as to raise serious doubts about the future of democracy in our country.

WHAT HAPPENED in the Illinois primary was a striking illustration of the crossover factor. A recent court order had given voters for the first time the right to ask for the ballot of either party. The heavy Democratic vote in the white suburbs around Chicago that normally go Republican by two or three to one was designed to humiliate Mayor Richard J. Daley and the candidates he favored. It was a smashing success.

One of the victims was Paul Simon. Winning election as lieutenant governor in 1968 against the Republican tide which put Richard Ogilvie in office as governor, Simon, an able and conscientious public servant, had never before lost an election. His successful opponent was Daniel Walker, who spent a million dollars on his campaign against Simon's half-million. Simon had tried to talk sense about the tax structure and the possible need to raise the income tax to relieve pressure on other forms of taxation.

Another victim was Raymond K. Berg, who had been approved by the Daley machine for Cook County state's attorney after the mayor had bumped Edward V. Hanrahan, the incumbent. Hanrahan is under indictment for obstructing justice, a charge growing out of the shoot-out at Black Panther headquarters on Chicago's South Side in which two Panthers were killed. Hanrahan's triumph seems to have been partly anti-Daley and partly an outpouring for a strong law-and-order, tough-on-crime-and-the-blacks candidate.

Daley emerged with up to 87 uncommitted delegates which will give him bargaining power at the Miami Beach convention. That is, it will unless the McGovern strategists succeed in challenging the selection as a violation of the rules granting proportional choice to women, blacks, and youth.

MUSKIE COMES to Wisconsin from Illinois with a victory that he badly needed to overcome his poor showing in Florida. With 63 per cent of the vote in the popularity contest against Eugene McCarthy, he got — and this was far more important — 59 committed delegates. He has his work cut out for him here by virtue of Wisconsin being Humphrey turf, neighboring on Minnesota, McGovern, with a strong appeal to the young and the activists, will be a powerful challenger.

The crossover factor is the concealed weapon can defeat the hopes and ambitions of all and sundry.

Departure Of GOP Liberals May Aid Party — for Awhile

The decline of the liberal wing of the Republican Party is a notable political fact. The latest sign is the departure from the party of Rep. Ogden R. Reid of New York, breaking a family tradition of over a century.

It is a curious situation. The Lindsays and the Reids move out of the G.O.P. President Nixon espouses sensational policies which would normally be considered more nearly the province of the Democrats.

In which direction, then, are the Republicans moving?

DESPITE THE CHINA policy, the espousal of Keynesian economics, the adoption of wage and price controls, surely the Republicans are moving in a relatively conservative direction. The Reids and Lindsays will agree, the Buckleys will disagree.

But the re-shaping of the Supreme Court by President Nixon, the road blocks erected toward school integration, the rejection of various social policies supported by the progressive wing, the concessions to southern Democrats — all these are marks of relative conservativism.

Many believe this Republican trend is in tune with the times. The country, they think, is becoming increasingly conservative. Particularly, it seems to them, the center of gravity of the Republican Party turns heavily against the eastern liberals. Governor Rockefeller, recognizing the trend, has himself moved in a conservative direction.

THE DECLINE of the Republican liberals marks a recurrent turning point. Progressivism in Republican ranks close to its highest pitch during the presidency of Theodore Roosevelt. It led to the deep party split of 1912. Had the Republicans not broken apart in that year, they would have held on to the White House, presiding over the long-delayed and necessary program of reform legislation started by Theodore Roosevelt. They would have handled American participation in World War I. History would have been considerably different.

But in 1912, as in 1972, relative conservatism was stronger than relative progressivism among rank and file Republicans. Whether the increasing number of uncommitted and non-partisan voters, who will decide the next election, are equally conservative is open to doubt. These uncommitted voters have plenty of discontents. Some of them, responding to George Wallace, turn to a kind of populist reactionism. Others, however, would respond to a program of action similar to Franklin Roosevelt's appeal to the forgotten man.

If the Republican powers-that-be are right, and the country is becoming more conservative, they may win the next election. But down the longer road, such a policy is bankrupt. In the long pull, there must be an energetic program of governmental action to meet the nation's problems that are steadily piling up.

THE DEMOCRATS, traditionally, have benefited from the alliance — deeply inconsistent — of the inherited southern wing of the party and the big city machines along with organized labor. The alliance is breaking apart. The South is turning increasingly Republican or Wallaceite. The big city machines have lost much of their power. Big labor is in political, social, and economic transition.

But the Democrats, on registration figures, are substantially the larger party with a strong pull on the uncommitted. The voters who will decide the outcome in years ahead, if not in 1972 (and this is debatable) are not on the right wing. They are left of center.

So, it seems to me, though the departure of the Lindsays and Reids may make Republicanism more coherent and consistent, it may not make it stronger. The Republican liberals were a leavening influence on their party. They kept it moving. And some day they may reemerge within the party, as they have consistently done down through this century. In an increasingly urban and suburban nation, in a youthful nation, there is need for progressivism in any party that expects to be a majority, or even to carry certain areas. American parties have always had room for mavericks. But it isn't easy today.

You Cant' Tell Forgeries Without A Score Card

WASHINGTON — My friend Metterling has just returned from a three-month visit to the green hell of Brazil. He called me as soon as he got back and said, "I hope you saved me Life magazine — I want to catch up on the Hward Hughes autobiography."

"I don't know how to tell you this, Metterling," I said, "but the Hughes autobiography is a forgery."

"Oh, what a pity! I was so looking forward to reading it once I got out of the jungle. What else is new?"

"NOT TOO MUCH. Jack Anderson printed a memo from an ITT lobbyist saying the company gave a $400,000 commitment to the Republicans."

"Fancy that! What did the Republicans have to say?"

"They said the memo was a forgery."

"Now, wait a minute. Do you mean to say that both the Howard Hughes book and the Jack Anderson memo were forgeries?"

"BUT WHY WOULD ITT want to forge Howard Hughes' autobiography?"

"Then what did ITT forge?"

"ITT didn't forge anything. They said the memo purportedly written by Dita Beard was a forgery."

"Dita Beard?"

"Yes, you see she worked for ITT and her name was on a memo saying she had the White House in the bag for a $400,000 contribution to the Republican National Convention."

"WHAT DID Howard Hughes have to say to that?"

"Howard Hughes had nothing to say to that. He did loan $250,000 to Richard Nixon's brother to bail him out of a restaurant business in Whittier, Calif., years ago, but that was in the Irving book which was a forgery. Irving apparently got it from Noah Dietrich's book about Hughes, which happens to be true."

"I see," Metterling said. "Well, where does that leave Life magazine?"

"Life magazine revealed last week that the Justice Department allegedly intervened on behalf of two friends of President Nixon's in a campaign donation case in San Diego."

"Was this at ITT's behest?" Metterling asked.

"NO, DAMMIT," I said, trying to keep my temper, "ITT had nothing to do with that. ITT's only involvement with San Diego was the offer they made to finance the Republican convention. Other than that, ITT is blameless, except that there seems to be some story that they ganged up with the Central Intelligence Agency in Chile to defeat President Allende."

"I thought it was Nicaragua."

"No, Howard Hughes went to Nicaragua."

"Why would Howard Hughes go to Nicaragua if ITT was having trouble in Chile?"

"BECAUSE HUGHES doesn't care what happens to Chile. You see, Hughes was forced out of the Bahamas after he blew the whistle on the Irvings and so he went to Nicaragua. But now he's in Vancouver."

"Well, who's in San Diego?"

"I see," Metterling said. "Why didn't the Republicans get the $400,000 to finance their convention in San Diego from Howard Hughes?"

"BECAUSE AT THAT time Howard Hughes was living in Las Vegas and the Republicans didn't want to hold their convention in a town that has legalized gambling."

"Did anyone ask for a contribution from the Irvings?"

"That hasn't come up yet in Anderson's column but no one is ruling it out. Listen, I have to go now. Is there anything else you want to ask me, Metterling?"

"Yeah. What happened to the President's trip to China?"

"What trip?"

Most Candidates Favor A Tax Hold

The Marin County Taxpayers Association has polled city council candidates in the April 11 election and found out most of those who answered would not oppose a drive to hold or reduce taxes.

Thirty-two of the 69 candidates responded to the association's inquiry.

The association said the purpose was not to "endorse or oppose any candidate but to gain some idea as to the philosophy of each candidate concerning taxes, which our members and others may take into consideration when voting." Of the 32 responding, 29 said flatly they would concur with a campaign to stop the rise of taxes. The three others, Herber C. Leney of Corte Madera, Randall L. Garrison of Fairfax and Robert Bauerle of Sausalito, gave qualified approval.

The candidates also were asked whether they would assist such a drive. Twenty-nine gave a firm "yes," with the other three, Joan Sestak of Larkspur, Donald Richards of Novato and Bauerle, giving qualified endorsement.

Another question was, "Do you believe existing taxes (in total) are too high?" Again, 29 said "yes," with qualified agreement from Mrs. Sestak, Garrison and Robert H. Lee of Larkspur.

Also, "Do you believe reasonable priorities can be established so that needed public services can be properly provided with existing tax rates?" Most answered "yes," including Thomas Zaragosa of Corte Madera and Lee and Mrs. Sestak, who gave qualifications.

Responding with a qualified "no" were Robert J. Flahive of Corte Madera and Sausalito's Bauerle. Thomas S. Price of Belvedere didn't answer, and Robert E. Capron of Mill Valley said he wasn't sure such an aim could be accomplished.

Another question was, "During your campaign are you recommending new activities or expansion of existing programs and policies?" Twenty-one answerej "yes."

Candidates responding to the survey, which will be included in the association's Tax News, were: Belvedere, Stuart C. Cullen, Thomas S. Price and Merritt K. Ruddock; Corte Madera, Robert J. Flahive, Herber C. Leney, Byron D. White and Thomas Zaragosa; Fairfax, Randall L. Garrison, Glenn B. Meagher and E. Ross Parkerson; Larkspur, William G. Fleckles, Elizabeth Johnson, Robert H. Lee and Joan Sestak.

Also, Mill Valley, Robert E. Capron and Dolph Jaeger; Novato, Daniel P. Donovan, John N. Morrison, Carlos N. Newton, Donald Richards, Fred F. Ruegg, John Schoonover and Dorothy P. Young; Ross, Peter B. Valentine; San Anselmo, Martin Blinder, Jack Burr II, Judy Emis, Sarah Nome, Pieter Toal; Sausalito, Robert Bauerle, Evert Heynneman, Robin Sweeny, and Tiburon, Allan N. Littman.

2 Rescued After Plane Is Ditched

An Air Force helicopter plucked two civilian fliers from the Pacific Ocean last night after they were forced to ditch their four-engine plane some 280 miles from the coast.

Frank Howard Watson, Waco, Tex., and Howard Hanson, of Agana, Guam, today were in satisfactory condition at a Hamilton Air Force Base hospital undergoing treatment for shock, a spokesman said.

The men were employes of Air Pacific Inc., and were ferrying a company De Havilland back to Guam when they apparently developed fuel problems after taking off from San Francisco the spokesman said.

They turned the plane back, he said, but were forced to set it in the water about 10:05 p.m. when the fuel was expended.

Both men managed to scramble out of the sinking plane and get into a life raft, from which they were picked up by rescuing aircraft.

The Coast Guard, Army and Navy sent seven rescue planes aloft and three cutters were dispatched after the fliers radioed for help.

Thwarting Development Is Endorsed

The April 11 ballot proposal in Fairfax to rezone the Marin Town and Country Club property to thwart reported plans for development has been endorsed by the town's park and recreation commission.

The unanimous action was omitted in a report of the commission's Tuesday night meeting to the Independent-Journal yesterday morning.

The four members of the commission who were present — Leo Cronin, Noel Cimino, Stanley W. Little and Joann Walla — endorsed the proposal, which would rezone the 23.5-acre resort from commercial to commercial-recreational. Commissioners Roman Hasinksi, Joseph E. Martinez and Russell Wilcox were absent.

Commission secretary Ernestine Healy said the vote on the proposal, a major campaign issue among city council candidates, drew little discussion.

Diabetes Unit Chief Reelected

Also elected at the general membership meeting Tuesday night at the Church in Ignacio were Peggy Woodward, first vice chairman; Elvis Reglia, second vice chairman; Harold Cleek, treasurer, and Deanne Stockland, secretary.

The association voted to take a booth at Novato's Western Weekend this year and to open an office from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday at the church.

Barry Jr. Finds A Right-On Church

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (UPI)—Rep. Barry M. Goldwater Jr. had to find another church for his marriage today because an Episcopalian pastor refused to allow pop tunes played by a four-man band on electrified instruments as wedding music.

The music for the service will include the Beatles' "Yesterday," "Man And A Woman," "You'll Never Walk Alone," and a medley from the movie "Love Story." The bridal march was to be the Carpenters' hit "We've Only Just Begun."

Goldwater, a Republican congressman from California who was referred to before his engagement as one of the nation's most eligible bachelors, is the son of the Arizona senator and former Republican presidential candidate.

He and Miss Gherman were to be married by the Rt. Rev. Joseph M. Harte, Episcopal Bishop of Arizona, at St. James Episcopal Church in Newport Beach. The modern wedding music had been approved by Harte and the ranking bishop of the Los Angeles diocese, Miss Gherman told friends.

But the pastor of St. James, the Rev. John P. Ashey II, refused to allow it, saying, "We do not have secular, pop or folk music other than that which has been composed for worship programs in connection with marriages at St. James."

The bride's mother said Goldwater turned down a compromise offer from the pastor, which would have allowed pop music on the church patio but only traditional tunes, played on the organ, in the church.

Goldwater and Miss Gherman moved the wedding to St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Laguna Beach, where the rector, The Rev. Robert Cornelison, agreed to their music. "I really have the highest respect for the Rev. Ashey for sticking to his guns for his parish," Goldwater said. "However, I think it is very sad for religion in today's world that a church or house of God cannot be flexible enough to accommodate all of its people."

Forget All, But Just Get Sausage Right

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—Frank P. D'Ambrosio wants $2,340, a shotgun, a deer rifle and a violin —but mostly he wants 500 pounds of sausage.

In a suit filed against Concetta M. D'Ambrosio, he said his former wife had not lived up to their 1970 divorce agreement.

D'Ambrosio said his wife had agreed to take over the family sausage business, pay him $131.10 per week and give him five pounds of sausage per week.

He said he wanted the sausage to make sure his ex-wife was maintaining the quality of meat on which his reputation as a master sausagemaker was based.

The payments stopped coming in April 1970, and he never got the guns and the violin —or the sausage, he said.

Bolivia Seeks Red Aide Cut

LA PAZ (UPI) — Bolivia asked the Soviet Union Wednesday to remove 119 officials from its La Paz embassy within one week.

Foreign Relations Minister Mario Gutierrez said six or seven Soviets could stay at the embassy and the move was not to be considered a break in relations between the two countries. Bolivia has three men in its Moscow embassy.

Gutierrez said the large number of Soviets in the embassy had aroused suspicion in some quarters and the move was requested by the armed forces, press organizations and civic groups.

Finch Raps Pollution Initiative

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Presidential counselor Robert H. Finch said yesterday a new public opinion poll shows that the so-called "pollution initiative" would be approved by California voters by a "very substantial margin."

Finch, who has been campaigning against the initiative which will appear on the June ballot as Prop. 9, said it would be a "disaster" if the measure were to pass.

"It is simply an unworkable mechanism," Finch told a news conference. "I'm dismayed that we have not made greater progress in trying to defeat it."

Finch said the survey was made by pollster Mervyn Field and made available to the White House. He said he did not know the specific pro and con breakdown but the poll showed Prop. 9 "would pass with a very substantial margin."

Prop. 9, sponsored by the People's Lobby of Los Angeles, would clamp tough restrictions on the composition of gasoline, ban new offshore oil drilling and declare a five-year moratorium on construction of nuclear powerplants.

Supporters have said they are pressing the measure because they are dissatisfied with action at the state level taken to clean up the natural environment.

"This is just a bad piece of work," Finch said of the initiative. "It's kind of a Wallace-like effort, a bumperstrip, simplistic-like solution."

He urged California public officials to speak out against the proposal and said Gov. Ronald Reagan has told him he will campaign against it.

Finch, a former California lieutenant governor, plans to leave the Nixon administration after the November election and return to California and decide whether he will run for governor in 1974 or the U.S. Senate.

State Sues Over Yacht Harbor Loan

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The state of California yesterday sued the city of San Francisco for accepting a $1.5 million loan to improve the Marina yacht harbor and failing to carry out the improvements.

In a Superior Court suit, the state sought to recover $1.3 million still owed on the loan and to take over the Marina facilities.

Among other things, the city has "failed to construct, provide and operate adequate toilet facilities" at the harbor, the state contended. As a result, boats using the harbor discharge more waste into the bay and for this pollution a $6,000 per day fine could be imposed.

Roadways, a public landing float, landscaping, a restaurant, and other facilities were promised when the state granted the loan in 1963, but have not been built, the suit says.

Despite numerous extensions and exhaustive efforts to give the city a chance to perform its promised construction, the state says there has been no action. A hearing was scheduled before Judge Byron Arnold for April 12.

Highest February Passenger Count

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco International Airport reported today the highest February passenger and freight volume in its history.

Some 1,025,200 passengers and 45,313,095 pounds of air freight passed through the airport last month, director James K. Carr said.

Suit Asks Removal Of Dikes From Bair Island

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Two conservationist organizations and a San Mateo man filed a U. S. District Court suit today seeking removal of dikes from Bair Island in San Francisco Bay.

The suit asks that Leslie Salt Co. be ordered to remove dikes it has constructed in and around the island so that "resultant ecological damage" can be repaired.

The suit, filed by attorney John D. Hoffman on behalf of the Sierra Club, the Save San Francisco Bay Association and Kent & Dedrick, alleges Leslie erected the dikesillegally.

The suit also asks that the company be enjoined from any filling or development of the island as a residential subdivision.

"Leslie's activities on Bair Island have unlawfully caused severe damage to the eco-system of San Francisco Bay," Sierra Club Executive Director Michael McCloskey told a news conference.

McCloskey said the Sierra Club expected the action "to establish the legal principle that areas which were illegally diked off must be restored to tidal action where this is still feasible, thus preventing these areas from being separated irrevocably from the Bay."

Will Siri, president of SSFBA, said he hoped the suit "will be a turning point in the 100-year-old trend to mindlessly fill the Bay."

Dedrick, who has made an extensive study of the South Bay, said government maps and surveys indicated Bair Island was an area of tidel marshland and sloughs in its original state.

As such, he said, it provided breeding, feeding and resting grounds for marine life and helped retard silt and sediment.

"Construction of the dikes destroyed the marsh, disrupted its ecological function, and interfered with navigation in the area," Dedrick said.
